Elephant and the U. S.
Chaplin May Leave Us
Gov. Smith. Mr. McAdoo
Warning from Mr. Mellon

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

S. W. STRAUS warns that building of apartment hotels and office buildings has been overdone. Mr. Stanley of the Metropolitan Life said the same a year earlier. Such warnings are never apt to restrain enthusiastic operators. But there is no reason why over stocks of corporations dealing in building material, no one else, should worry.

If you want a keeper give his elephant a banana for one meal you would regularly. The elephant won't need any more "for a week." Come back in a year or so and you'll find the elephant ready for more.

Like the elephant, this country has a gigantic capacity to absorb. Suppose New York City, for instance, should build 20,000 living apartments in a single year? One year hence there would be 20,000 new "rich people" to fill them all. It is something like the talk about "the saturation" in the automobile business.

ONE old car is junked, two new cars are built. The danger is not so much with the builder of a new apartment house or office building as with the owner of the out of date. It may have to come down.

BRITAIN moans because it can't compete with American moving pictures. Charlie Chaplin may comfort Britain's land by going back there to make pictures when his troubles end. Then they make you pay income tax there, they don't let your angry wife interfere with your money. Chaplin would favor the British by opening a studio somewhere on the southern coast of England, where it is warm in Winter, Paris and Monte Carlo are.

GOVERNOR RITCHIE of Maryland himself a candidate widely discussed in connection with the Democratic presidential nomination, says Governor Smith of New York "is the outstanding Democrat in the United States."

On the other hand Mr. Milton, editor of the Chattanooga News, says Willis G. McAdoo is the only man for the Democrats to nominate. Mr. Milton says Governor Smith cannot be nominated because "the country is 70 per cent dry, and no wet can be elected to the presidency." Governor Smith's friends say, "Wait and see."

MR. MELLON is paying off the country's heavy war debt as part of the job he undertook when he became Secretary of the Treasury. He understands finance, and under his management the billions of public debt melt away. If Mr. Mellon continues at the present rate Uncle Sam won't owe a dollar 25 years hence.

MR. MELLON tries also to protect the people in their earnings, widows, children and the old especially, at that is harder work. You cannot save people to be wise.

Treasury agents watch and prosecute sellers of fraudulent securities. But in spite of all effort Mr. Mellon shows that five hundred millions a year are taken dishonestly from the public savings.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER still has the New York Stock Exchange seat he bought in 1883, 44 years ago. He never uses it, keeps it perhaps to remind him of old days and when he was making money for himself before he began spending his millions in Rockefeller Foundations, institutes, fighting disease—for other people.

That seat, which probably cost Mr. Rockefeller less than $50,000, he could sell now for $180,000. If he holds it a little longer it will be worth $200,000.

THE 1,100 seats of the 1,100 stock exchange members are worth more than $200,000,000 now, which would surprise gentlemen that started the exchange long ago. Then $200,000 was a fortune, and a million something to be talked of in whispers. Now we move up to the billion.

BROKERS begin work at 10, stop at 3, and there never can be more than 1,100 of them. That is something for labor unions to aim at, including a higher value for membership in the union.

It must be remembered, however, that while the broker works from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m., he worries from 3 p. m. to 10 a. m. Don't envy him.

WHAT is the wealth of the United States? There is no guessing. Life insurance alone amounts to eighty thousand millions of dollars. It was increased by more than sixteen billions 1926. If the working lives of those insured sufficiently provident to insure themselves are worth eighty billions, what is the value of all the farms, oil wells and other wealth?

The railroads of the United States will spend a billion dollars this year on improvements to their trackage, etc., which means new wealth created.

TEMPERATURE WILL DROP NEAR ZERO, FORECAST

Heavy Fog Enveloping City Lifts as Mercury Column Starts Slump

DRIVING DANGEROUS

Few Accidents Reported; Several Cars Skid into Ditches Along Highways

Prospects of near zero weather in Marion over Sunday were felt here today, when the first bite of the cold northwest winds bringing the predicted cold wave, swept the city.

Driving the moist, fog-laden atmosphere of the last week ahead of it, the cold winds sent the mercury in thermometers rapidly down about noon today. Automobile drivers shifted from caution in driving in a dense fog that hampered vision to driving on streets glazed with ice which made brakes useless and sudden stopping impossible.

Travel Dangerous

Marion groped its way home from work last night and out to work this morning through a drifting, murky fog that blotted out lights, confused pedestrians and motorists and made travel extremely dangerous.

Setting over the city late Friday afternoon the fog density increased until at midnight objects at a short distance were scarcely visible. Despite the danger of travel there were no serious accidents reported. Several machines went into the ditch when the drivers piloted them from the road on the outskirts of the city, but no one was injured and the only damage was to clothes and tempers in getting the cars back onto the highway.

Expect Drop

Arrival of the delayed cold wave which was first predicted for the state early in the week will send the mercury down from 25 to 30 degrees tonight and tomorrow. The thaw of the last week will disappear under biting winds from the northwest, the weatherman in Columbus said today.

Skies To Be Clear

Skies will be clear after the arrival of the cold wave, the forecaster said, with the exception of the southeast portion of the state, which will have snow. In Marion the weather is predicted clear, with a level temperature over Sunday.

Yesterday's fog was the thickiest and stickiest that has hit Marion in many years. Everything dripped with moisture. Water ran from roofs into gutters as though a light rain had fallen. Clotted with a clinging veil of fog windshields and windows of machines were almost opaque and drivers were forced to use automatic wipers and cloths to clear the glass so they could drive.

Temperature Range

The temperature ranged from 43 degrees, the high mark yesterday, to just freezing, 32 degrees last night. The predicted cold wave was being felt in the city this noon, when the mercury dropped 10 degrees in less than an hour, and the streets and sidewalks became glazed with a sheet of skim ice that offered treacherous traction for automobiles and regular slides for pedestrians.

Cold waves this year have followed almost the same course as last year. The cold spell which began here today arrived almost at the same hour last year, when the mercury was forced down to a low mark of four degrees above zero from a high mark of 28, in a few hours.

WOULD PLACE W. CENTER BACK ON PAVING LIST

Petition to Council Looms Following Merchants' Inspection of Street Today

PAVEMENT IN RUINS

Removal of Snow and Ice Discloses Pitiful Condition of City's Traffic Artery

Request that city officials consider putting the W. Center-st paving and widening program back in the improvement program of 1927 will likely be made of city council within a short time.

This was indicated today as W. Center-st merchants and business men viewed the ruins of what was once a pavement, now visible once more as the snow and ice that has covered the bumps and chuck holes melted into pools of soupy water.

A meeting of the W. Center-st Improvement Association will be held shortly, Ralph T. Lewis, president, said today, and it will discuss the paving and widening project. From this meeting will come the policy of the Association with regard to the improvement, and it is expected that a delegation will be sent to city council with a request that that body reconsider its action of leaving the W. Center-st project off the list of improvements for this year.

Would Delay Columbia-st Project

Suggestion will be made to city officials that the improvement program be changed to include W. Center-st and that the resurfacing of Columbia-st, now on the program, be delayed until later. W. Center-st merchants are of the opinion that if the city finances will not stand the strain of making both improvements this year, the Columbia-st project should be delayed and the money spent on W. Center-st.

On inspection of W. Center-st, from Main-st to the Hocking Valley tracks showed that in several places the street car tracks are under water, having sung out of sight in the holes in the street. The bricks, put down when the street was first paved years ago, are heaved and twisted and broken from curb to curb, M. L. McDaniel, vice president of the W. Center-st Improvement Association made a tour of the section under discussion, and also of Columbia-st this morning. There is

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE TO CONTINUE CAMPAIGN

Extension Ordered When Several Soliciting Groups Are Unable To Finish Work

As a consequence of several of the groups of solicitors being unable to complete their work this week in connection with the membership campaign being conducted by the Marion Chamber of Commerce, the campaign will be continued for several days, it was announced today by officers of the organization.

In connection with the announcement it was stated that practically all of the 15 groups of solicitors engaged in the movement to increase the membership to 000 or more report having made encouraging progress, several being near their goal. Each group, representing some definite branch of business or industry, is expected to obtain at least 40 memberships. The division representing steam shovel manufacturers has exceeded its quota with a total of 45 memberships and several other groups are near the 40 mark, it was stated today.

It was originally planned to bring the campaign to a close tonight but this has been found impossible, due to business engagements and other circumstances having prevented many of the solicitors from seeing their membership prospects this week.

FLOODED OHIO SETTLEMENTS TO BE CUT OFF

Practically Every Stream in Southern Part of State Overflowing

DROP IN TEMPERATURE

Ohio River on Rampage; Rising Rapidly at East Liverpool

Columbus, Jan. 22—Ohio settlements now marooned because of the flooded conditions of southern Ohio streams, will awaken Sunday to find themselves isolated in a field of ice, it was predicted here today by U. S. Weatherman Alexander.

Bitter cold weather generally throughout the state, following a drop of 25 to 30 degrees by Sunday sunrise, and rain changing to snow is Alexander's expectation. The cold wave will continue for several days, the weatherman believes.

Practically every stream in the southern Ohio watershed was at a flood stage or past it, according to reports received here. But Alexander reported the flood damage was not of great moment, though suffering by families driven from their lowland homes will be prolonged by the cold wave.

East Liverpool officials reported a landslide was feared on the Pennsylvania-av hill and threatened to send the Main-st car line and two potteries into the river.

Traffic congestion on the Pennsylvania Railroad caused Friday by a landslide at Bellaire still continued today though trains were being rerouted and schedules continued.

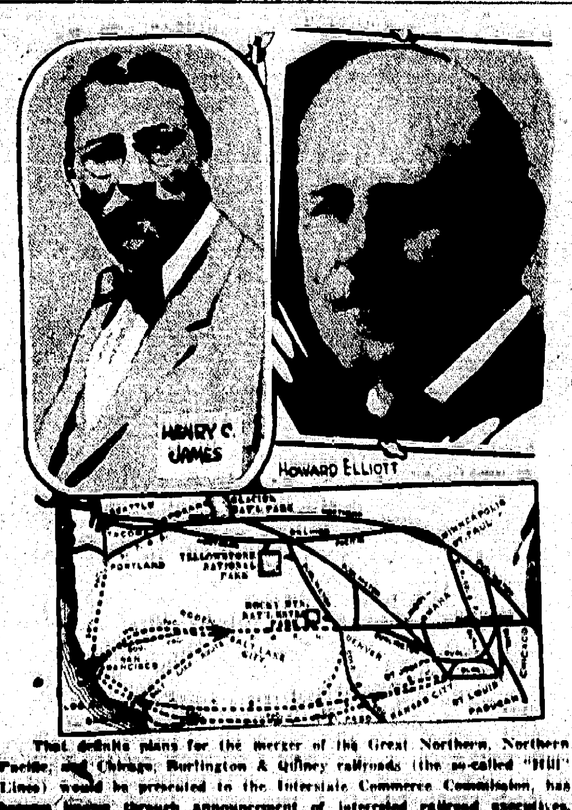
Great Rail System

Definite Plans for Merger of Approximately 28,000 Miles of Railroad Being Made; Include Merger of Great Northern and "Hill" Lines



That definite plans for the merger of the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroads (the so-called "Hill" Lines) would be presented to the Interstate Commerce Commission, has become known through announcement of interested railroad executives. The merger would comprise approximately 28,000 miles of railroad, making the largest rail system in the world. Heavy lines on map above show roads included; dotted lines reveal connecting divisions of other roads, which, however, are not in the merger, although Henry Curtiss James, above, largest individual stockholder in the roads included in the merger plan also is the largest individual stockholder in two of the connecting railroads—Western Pacific and Southern Pacific. James is reputed to own more railroad stock than any other man in the world. Howard Elliott, also above, is chairman of the Northern Pacific board.

Two Men Hurt, Huckster Wagon is Destroyed, Auto Damaged In Norton Crash

Kerosene Comes in Contact with Small Stove, Setting Fire to Vehicle; Horses Frightened and Stage Runaway, Pulling Wheel Over Customer's Foot

One man is suffering from painful burns, another has a smashed foot, a huckster wagon is completely destroyed and an automobile badly damaged as the result of a highway accident near the William Griffiths home, Marion-Delaware-rd, south of Norton at 7 o'clock last night.

While D. W. Selanders, Waldo grocer and operator of the huckster wagon, was filling an order of kerosene for Griffiths, an automobile driven by Ed Wilcox, automobile salesman, employed at the Neville Garage, Delaware, crashed into the rear of the wagon.

Wagon Catches Fire

The force of the collision was sufficient to send the kerosene measure spinning from Selanders' hand and its contents to come in contact with the small heating stove in the wagon. In a flash the wagon interior was a mass of flames and Selanders' clothes were afire. He jumped from the wagon as his frightened team broke away and started to run.

The horses freed themselves from the wagon within a short distance and proceeded northward along the road, returning later. Neither was injured.

Foot Injured

Griffiths was standing at the side of the wagon at the time of the crash and the horses at the start of their mad run drew the wheels of the wagon across his foot, painfully injuring it.

Selanders suffered burns about his hands and wrists in his efforts to extinguish the fire in his wagon and on his clothes. He also sustained a deep cut on his forehead received, he believes, as he jumped from the wagon.

Vehicle Destroyed

Efforts to fight the wagon fire were in vain. The vehicle and its contents were destroyed along with the receipts of the day's business. Selanders places his loss at about $1,000.

Wilcox stated this morning that he did not see the wagon at the time of the accident. There was a heavy fog hanging over the road at the time. He estimated the damage to the automobile at $200.

Deputy Sheriff Perle Stanford of Delaware County was summoned to the accident last night for an investigation.

FARM BILL O K

McNary-Haugen Measure Gets Approval of Committee

Washington, Jan. 22—The new McNary-Haugen agricultural relief bill was approved today by the senate agriculture committee by an unanimous vote.

SITUATION IN CHINA IS TENSE AS MOBS RIOT

Only Restraint of Foreign Residents Prevents Bloodshed and Serious Trouble

U. S. IS WORRIED

Evacuation of American Citizens Continues; Marines on Hand

Shanghai, Jan. 22—Only the most careful restraint on the part of the foreign patrols prevented bloodshed and serious consequences today when Chinese mobs broke loose into disorder and rioting.

The situation is extremely tense and only by the greatest care can a clash between the Chinese and foreigners be avoided.

A climax was brought about today when tramway workers invaded the barbarns and pushed street cars out of the barns. They were unopposed as they pushed the cars through the streets until they reached Nanking, the fashionable shopping area of Shanghai. There the native police interfered when an attempt was made to block the cross-streets. Mobs formed quickly and there was every indication of a prearranged demonstration.

Every foreign defense unit was mobilized and aided by fire engines endeavored to quell the rioters. The foreign units refrained from using their firearms but were handy with their batons and streams of water from the fire engines were played upon the Chinese, eventually dispersing the demonstrators.

The Flying Wedge

With a flying wedge formation and wielding their batons right and left the police pushed the sullen Chinese into the cross streets, leaving abandoned tram-cars and debris of conflict strewn along the band for half a mile.

Mounted police, volunteer corps with armored cars and foreign guards with rifles are now patrolling the main streets.

Chinese defense units fired several shots but there have been no reports of casualties.

Machine guns have been mounted at strategic points.

COUNCIL GRANTS $36,799 ABOVE QUOTA FOR 1926

Actual Increase Only $10,992.56, Finance Chairman R. E. Prettyman Explains

$25,807 FOR EMERGENCY

Boost To Take Care of Municipal Court, Added Rent, Proposed Pay Raises

After several weeks of deliberation, including a series of conferences and two postponed meetings, City Council last night adopted the annual appropriation ordinance, designating the amount of money set aside for operating costs of the various city offices and departments during 1927. It totals $331,080.27, an increase of $36,799.82 over the amount of appropriations made for 1926.

The actual increase, however, is only $10,992.56, according to an explanation of the ordinance made by R. E. Prettyman, chairman of the finance committee, following last night's meeting.

Emergency Fund

Mr. Prettyman called attention to the fact that included in the appropriations are contingent accounts totaling $25,807.26 which are set aside only for emergency use and are not allowed for any specific purpose. As a consequence, he said, this should be deducted from the total appropriation figure. This would leave a net allowance of $305,273.01 for actual operating costs of the various offices and departments, an increase of $10,992.56 over last year's total.

The contingent accounts are held in reserve and can be used only on special action by council. Mr. Prettyman stated. Last year no such accounts were established, all of the estimated revenue being definitely allotted to the various funds for specific use.

Purpose of Boost

The $10,922.56 increase, comparison of appropriation figures for 1926 and 1927 discloses, is due to Municipal Court expense, a new item, to a proposed increase in salaries for firemen and policemen and to a boost in rent for the city offices resulting from opening of the Municipal Court.

Self-Sustaining

The Municipal Court appropriation totals $12,415, the pay raise for firemen and police is approximately $5,500 and the city office rent has gone up $2,910. It is predicted that the Municipal Court will gradually become self-sustaining and that as a consequence the cost of its operation will not fall upon the taxpayers.

The increase in appropriations will not come from collection of taxes, councilmen stated following enactment of the ordinance. The City Garbage Collection Department which was allowed an increase of $5,070, is self-sustaining, it was pointed out, and as a consequence its additional appropriation will come from its own earnings. The proposed increase in pay for firemen and police will be covered by receipts from collection of fines in Municipal Court, it was stated.

Receipts from taxes for the city's operating expenses will total $107,100, according to figures submitted by the County Budget Commission, which is said to be approximately $3,000 less than the amount received in 1926.

1926 Close

At the close of 1926 the city had unincumbered balances in its various funds totalling $66,536.86 and receipts estimated from other sources will amount to $110,450, making a total of $331,986.86 of estimated revenue for the year.

The ordinance adopted last night appropriates practically the full amount of these estimated receipts, including the contingent funds totalling $25,807.26.

It is practically certain that little of these contingent funds will be spent and that not all of the other appropriations will be used up, giving virtual assurance of a balance in the treasury at the close of the year, members of the finance committee state.

The fact that the cash balance in the city treasury was $66,536.86 at the close of 1926 is pointed out to support the prediction that results will be the same this year.

Funds Not Depleted

Appropriations made at the beginning of last year covered all of the estimated revenue and that the allow-

Former Marion Woman and Daughter Instantly Killed In Crossing Accident

Mrs. Katie Woods, 35, and daughter, Lillian, 15, of Saginaw, Mich., until a year ago residents of Marion, were instantly killed in a grade crossing crash at Chesaning, Mich., Thursday night, according to information received here today.

Mrs. Woods is a sister of Mrs. Forest Anderson, 290 Waterloo-st, who received a brief message stating that Mrs. Woods and her daughter had been seriously injured.

The accident occurred when the Woods machine stalled on the Michigan Central crossing in Chesaning, a town near Saginaw. A crack passenger train on the line struck the car, hurling it 70 feet. Bodies of Mrs. Woods and her daughter were thrown clear of the wreckage.

A coroner's jury held the tragedy accidental.

The bodies will arrive in Marion tonight, accompanied by Mrs. Anderson, who left immediately for Saginaw upon receipt of the message.

Surviving with Mr. Woods, who makes his home in Huntington, W. Va., and Mrs. Anderson is a brother, Frank Crawford, Cincinnati.

Mrs. Woods was the daughter of John and Jane Langdon Dodds and was born in Cabell County, W. Va., in 1892. Her daughter who figured in the double tragedy had been an invalid all her life suffering from infantile paralysis.

Arrangements are being made to hold funeral services here with burial in Marion Cemetery.

Dopesters Look on M'Adoo As Ready to Put Up Fight

See Him as Candidate on Prospective Independent Democratic Party

BY CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—William Gibbs McAdoo as a third party candidate next year is an idea which is just beginning to dawn on Washington.

W/M.G. McADOO

Politicians had just about settled it in their own minds that McAdoo was eliminated as a Democratic presidential possibility. They reckoned that he might make a lot of trouble for other aspirants of the Democrats 1928 convention, but they were generally of the opinion that he stood no chance on his own account.

Yet, here he is just starting on a tour of the south, here are his supporters beginning to give out statements and here he is about to open up headquarters and a speakers' bureau in the capital.

The noticeable thing is that his friends hardly mention him as a likely nominee on the regular Democratic ticket, but they do talk a lot about him as the standard bearer of a prospective independent Democratic faction if the regulars make a choice not to his liking.

EVERYBODY knows that the Democratic party is split as badly as the Republican party is split, but it hasn't been split out-and-out, into two separate tickets since 1900, when the gold bugs bolted William Jennings Bryan's free silver nomination.

Republican secessions are more recently familiar—as Robert M. La Follette's, no longer ago than 1924, and Col. Roosevelt's in 1912.

So this threatened McAdoo bolt, if it materializes, will be the first one within the memory of a majority of the present generation of Democratic voters, and it's anybody's guess how they'll act about it.

MCADOO, so they say, is ambitious to become a second Bryan.

No doubt he's willing to go Bryan one better, and be elected to something, but even if he can't accomplish that, the gossip is that he wants to be so big a man in the Democratic party that nobody else can do anything with it unless he says so.

This is an outlook the dopesters down at the Capitol hadn't thought of before, and it's set 'em to speculating.

FIRST off, it may appear that the problem solves itself very easily—

If the Republicans are united and the Democrats split, the natural inference is that the former will win hands down.

But will the Republicans be united? They weren't at the last national election. To be sure, the Progressives were pretty badly beaten, which may be supposed to have discouraged them. Yes, but will they be so much discouraged if the Democrats are divided, too, in 1928? Won't they think, maybe? —"Now's our chance," and try it again, harder than ever.

SUPPOSE it isn't a triangular fight? Suppose it's quadrangular?

A triangular campaign is hard enough to guess on. A quadrangular one would be something awful. The polling would be in every direction.

Imagine four presidential candidates in the field like this, for instance: Coolidge, Al Smith, McAdoo and Borah.

It would take some tall prophesying to tell how a race of that sort would come out. As likely as not, the House of representatives would have to settle it.

ARREST VAGRANT AS HE ASKS FOR FREE LODGING

Three Unopened Tins of "Canned Heat" Found in Man's Possession

When Walter Hunter, 30, a vagrant who said that he had no definite place of residence, applied for free lodgings at the city prison he was accommodated after being placed under arrest on an intoxication charge.

Walter's breath was redolent with fumes of canned heat and in addition to the quantity of this modern stimulant which he had obviously consumed, three unopened cans of the original product were found in his pockets.

Yesterday after Hunter had sobered up and his stock of unused beverage had been confiscated, he was arraigned before Municipal Judge Martin.

"Just give me 15 minutes and I will leave Marion forever," the prisoner informed the judge.

"That suits the court; be on your way and don't forget to keep on going," the judge answered.

When last seen Hunter was enroute toward the railroad yards in search of free transportation to his next stopping place.

Marion Presbyter... to Raise $52,300 for National Fund

CAMPAIGN OPENS MONDAY NIGHT; CLOSES MARCH 1

Ohio's Share of $15,000,000 Goal Is $1,350,000; To Organize for Drive

Approximately $52,300 will be sought by the Marion Presbytery between Monday night and March 1, it was announced today. The sum will be added to the fund to be contributed as Ohio's share in the $15,000,000 being raised nationally to provide financial support for Presbyterian ministers. The entire Ohio sum will probably total $1,350,000.

For the purpose of organizing the active men of Marion prominent men of Marion county will meet Monday night, Jan. 24, in the ballroom at Hotel Harding, following dinner there. Pastors, church chairmen, clerk of sessions and members of the board of trustees of the entire Presbytery will be ligible. Judge W. L. Cameron, Marysville, of the Marion Presbytery, will preside. Rev. John T. Goss of Philadelphia, treasurer of the Board of Ministerial Relief, will make an address.

Ohio Campaigns

The Ohio campaigns will be under the general supervision of the national finance committee, U. S. Presbyterian church, of which Will H. Hays is chairman and Andrew W. Mellon, treasurer. Mr. Hays, who as chairman, was authorized by the General assembly to raise the fund, has appointed Presbytery chairman in each district to organize their local territory and conduct the campaign.

Add 10 Per Cent

The quotas in the drive were set by adding 10 per cent to the benevolence of each Presbytery for the year 1925 when the raising of the pension fund was authorized. This fund will eventually supplant all present forms of annuities and aid for ministers, their widows and families. The maximum pension will now be $600 a year and the maximum, $2,000. Contributions may be paid over a period of five years, one-fifth each year, thus aiding the individual to make a larger gift than if they all fell due at once.

Among the local Presbytery notables who will be present at the dinner Monday night are, Rev. R. W. Smiley, W. J. Bayler, M. A. Mickley, J. H. Prettyman, Rev. Alfred W. Swan, Rev. James M. Fisher, Edward Webb, E. Cowan and T. A. Cooper, as well as any others from Bellefontaine, Fort Mt. Gilead, Marysville, Kenton, Ada, Delaware, Bucyrus, Galion, Ashland, Columbus, Crestline, Upper Sandusky, Huntsville, DeCliff, Ostrander, Chesterville, LaRue, Iberia, Kilbourne, Belle Center and Rushsylvania.

Youth and Success

BY REV. GEORGE E. GROVES
Pastor Central Christian Church

"YOUTH, 17, Wins $25,000 Prize" is the news item that has been published in every daily paper and "broadcast" over the country during the last few days.

The outstanding facts of the story are these:—George Young, son of a widowed and poverty-stricken mother of Toronto, Can., fighting a losing battle with poverty, starting across the continent in a worn-out motorcycle, which had to be abandoned, completing the remaining part of the journey of 1,000 miles on foot, arriving at Los Angeles with 60 cents in his pocket, entering a contest with 101 of the best swimmers in the country, covering 22 miles in less than 16 hours, and won a prize of $25,000.00.

This story while apparently dealing mainly with physical prowess, is also a vivid portrayal of some of the fundamental principles of success, which every youth must observe in order to triumph not only on the lower plane of the physical, but also on the higher elevations of the intellectual and spiritual.

Success is the result of training. From the age of three this youth had practiced swimming in the chilly water of Lake Ontario. Muscle, mind and fiber reach their highest point of efficiency only after years of rigid discipline and exercise.

Success is achieved by an unswerving determination. The embarrassment of poverty, repeated failures, physical sacrifice, the keenest competition, did not for a moment deter this youth from his one great resolve to win the prize. The pathway to success is never smooth and easy to travel. This is the same road over which Lincoln, Garfield, Paul,—the great men of this earth have all traveled.

An essential of success is character. One of the reasons given by this youth when asked how he could endure the 16-hour ordeal in the icy waters was: "I have always lived a clean life." Muscle renders 100 per cent efficiency only when habits have been correct. Brain cells function normally only when moral detours have been avoided. The higher spiritual qualities cannot shine when befogged with a cloudy moral atmosphere.

Success is inspired by a worthy ideal. "I succeeded because of my mother's love," was the youth's explanation of his triumph. Through all of his misfortunes, failures and trials the youth was inspired by the fact that there was one who loved him, believed in his ability and cheered him even in hours of defeat. The supreme motive of his life was to measure up to this good mother's expectation, and to make her happy. Fortunate indeed is the youth who goes forward to achieve success impelled and inspired by a lofty ideal.

George Young won his prize and he won it by traveling the road over which every youth must walk if he would achieve success.

HOCKING TRACK SUPERVISOR TO ATTEND MEET

F. A. Sparks Will Go to Columbus Supervisor Conference Monday

F. A. Sparks, track supervisor of the Hocking Valley Railroad in this district, will attend the meeting of supervisors and other officials of the entire Hocking Valley Railroad Co., Monday, at the Neil House, Columbus.

The meeting promises to be one of the greatest events of the year in Hocking Valley circles and will be featured by the awarding of the trophy to the winner of the safety contest which has been conducted on the road during the last six months.

Three Entered

The contest was staged between three departments, the Maintenance of Way division, the Motive Power department and the Transportation department. For each accident occurring in each division a certain number of debits were marked against that department.

With returns from every month with the exception of December reported here, the Motive Power department looks like a sure winner of the contest. This department has only 42 black marks against it while the Maintenance of Way division is next with 57 debits. The Transportation department is out of the race with 120 debits for five months.

December Reports

Reports for December will be given Monday at the meeting and the totals summed up. The department with the lowest number of debits chalked up against it will be awarded the trophy.

The meeting will be called early Monday and will probably continue until late afternoon, other business being transacted in addition to the immediate awarding of the trophy.

The safety contest was started last summer in order to encourage safety in every department of the Hocking Valley. The number of accidents on the railroad have shown material decrease since the contest began.

Provisions of the contest stated that it should begin July 1 and come to a close at the end of the year 1926.

Operate On Schedule

Heavy rains and the great thaw of the last few days have failed to hinder the operation of passenger trains on schedule time on all railroads running through Marion.

While motor busses were behind schedule most of the week because of icy pavements, the passenger trains through Marion were on time consistently. Snows and high water tied up traffic in some parts of the state and country this week.

Visits Here.

O. L. Enos, divisional passenger agent, Kent Division, Erie Railroad, was in Marion yesterday.

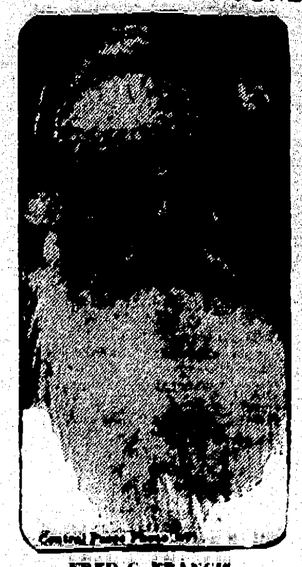
CITY MUST ERECT FUNERAL PYRE TO GET FORTUNE



FRED C. FRANCIS

Peoria, Ill., Jan. 22—Fred C. Francis, aged Kewanee recluse, is dead, and his extensive lands are willed to his city—on one condition—that a funeral pyre be built near his house and his body cremated, his ashes tossed to the winds. Kewanee has assented.

Francis lived in a "mystery" house two miles from Kewanee. His death disclosed many secrets; hidden chambers, secret panels, a beautiful conservatory, costly statuary and paintings.

The hermit was a University of Illinois graduate. Provision is made in his will for the county club for that institution to build a club-house and lay out a park on a section of his land.

A physical culture enthusiast, Francis was an authority on the subject, and even at his extreme age, followed the "daily dozen" faithfully.

He spurned the radio.

MINER DELEGATES ARE ORDERED TO STAND PAT

Convention Wants Renewal of Jacksonville Agreement of 1922

Columbus, Jan. 22—"Stand pat' for a renewal of the Jacksonville agreement of 1922," was the instructions delegates carried from here today to the international convention of the United Mine Workers of America at Indianapolis, following the thirty-seventh meeting of the Ohio miners of District 6.

The convention of district 6 which closed here late yesterday unanimously indorsed this wage scale instruction to delegates who will attend the Indianapolis convention Tuesday.

Seven clauses were included in the wage resolutions as drawn up by the committee and favored by the delegates. They demand: No backward step in the wage scale calling for 80 cents per ton for loading, and $7.25 to $7.50 for an eight hour day; that internal affairs within various scale districts be referred to those districts, and that no basic scale be agreed upon that does not permit each scale district to negotiate joint contracts on that basis; elimination of penalty clauses from contracts; interstate agreement, and extension of central competitive field of western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois by including outlying districts.

NEW CAR ON DISPLAY AT MARION BUICK CO.

Town Brougham Model Placed on Exhibit in Garage Show Rooms

The newest body model of the 1927 line of Buick motor cars now is on display at the showrooms of the Marion Buick Co., E. Center-st.

The new body model is the town brougham, a type introduced by Buick at the motor shows throughout the country for the first time this year. It is a five passenger model, with landau hinges which distinguish the brougham type. It is built on the series 115 chassis of Buick cars.

It carries the same color scheme and it is a companion model to the de luxe two-passenger coupe of the same wheelbase. The upper part of the body, including the top, is Delaware green, with the lower part, below the belt, in Yorktown green. The molding is black with double gold striping. Wheels are natural wood, with hub, brake drums and felloes painted and striped to match the body. The upholstering and trim is mohair plush, colored to harmonize with the body colors.

WJZ, NETWORK TO GIVE HOUR OF LIGHT OPERA

Selection from Past and Present Productions Will Be Given by Artists

A new feature on the program of WJZ and the stations of the "Blue Network," WBZ and KDKA, will be a light opera hour. This new period will be devoted to the rendition of popular selections from past and present light operas, musical comedies and revues and will feature as soloist Gladys Rice, soprano and Frank Munn, tenor, supported by a large orchestra under the direction of Mr. Walter Haenschen. The initial broadcast of this new feature will take place from the above stations at 9:30 o'clock, Monday night, Jan. 24 and will be a regular weekly feature from the stations mentioned at the same time.

Famous Teams

Gladys Rice, the beautiful young soprano soloist, who will be heard in this new broadcast series is the daughter of the old time vaudetille team of Sally Cohen and John C. Rice. Perhaps the fond memories that the older generation have of that pair is one cause of Miss Rice's enormous popularity. She is a radio favorite and has been heard many times. Miss Rice's voice has not been confined to the microphone, however, as she played the prima donna role in "Sweethearts" a season or two ago and also recorded for three of the largest phonograph companies. She also danced in one of Broadway's musical hits, "The Spring Maid."

Started As Engineer

Frank Munn is a New York boy, born in that city in 1896 and educated in the public and high schools of the Metropolitan district. He later was trained in mechanical engineering and specialized in automotive engineering. He commenced the study of voice when he was 25 years of age and while singing at a performance was so favorably received that he decided to abandon the study of mechanical engineering in favor of a professional career. He was signed up with a large recording company and is now making many appearances in the concert field in addition to his great popularity with the radio audience.

In the opening broadcast among other compositions to be heard will be selections from "The Vagabond King," "The Desert Song," "Castles in the Air," "Queen High," "Gay Paree," "The Ramblers," "Betsy" and "Honey moon Lane."

REPORTED BETTER

Delmar Mulvaine, who sustained injuries to his head when he fell several weeks ago is reported to be improving at his home, N. Main-st.

ELBOW FRACTURED

Mrs. Samuel Blocksom, E. George-st, sustained a fractured left elbow when she fell on the ice Thursday.

Marion Radio Fans Hear 'Garden Scene' from 'Faust' by Chicago Civic Opera Co.

Broadcast Through 25 Stations of Red and Blue Networks Linked by Special Circuits To Transmit Second Act of Schedule

Hundreds of Marion radio fans last night listened to the "Garden Scene" from Gounod's "Faust" which was broadcast through 25 stations of the red and blue networks linked by special circuits to transmit the second act of the Chicago Civic Opera Company's regular production of "Faust" direct from the stage of the auditorium in Chicago.

Although a few persons complained because of "noisy air" and static, the reception here was generally clear since it could be obtained from almost any Ohio station.

With Milton J. Cross, prominent announcer who possesses a background of thorough operatic training, handling the verbal portion of the broadcast and aided by the most elaborate system of apparatus ever used in broadcasting, the music was carried to New York and relayed to the following stations: WEAF and WJZ, New York; WEEI, Boston; WBZ, Springfield and Boston; WJAR, Providence; WCSH, Portland, Me.; WGY, Schenectady; WGR, Buffalo; WTAG, Worcester, Mass.; WLIT, Philadelphia; WRC, Washington; WHAS, Louisville; WSB, Atlanta; WSM, Nashville; WSAI, Cincinnati; WTAM, Cleveland; KDKA and WCAE, Pittsburgh; KYW and WGN, Chicago; KSD, St. Louis; WWJ, Detroit; WOC, Davenport; WCCO, Minneapolis-St. Paul, and WDAF, Kansas City.

Cast of Play

The broadcast brought to the air in the leading roles Edith Mason as Mrguerite, Maria Claessens as Martha, Irene Pavloska as Siebel, Charles Hackett as Faust and Vanni-Marcoux as Mephistopheles, besides the Chicago organization's orchestra under the baton of Musical Director Giorgio Polacco.

Fifteen separate microphone channels were used, each one consisting of one or more microphones, all of which led to a specially designed mixing panel, where the music absorbed by the various microphones was first amplified separately and then blended so that each portion carried proper emphasis. The microphones were distributed at points of vantage on the stage, in the flies and wings, along the apron of the stage, in the orchestra pit and high over the heads of the audience in the auditorium proper. Even the back wall of the stage had its pick-up arrangement. In this manner, no matter what the position of the artists on the stage, every portion of the vocal music, as well as the orchestrau accompaniment was absorbed by the microphones and carried to the mixing panel.

Microphones Hidden

Practically all the microphones were concealed, so that neither the artists nor the audience watching the performance had a visible reminder that the "Garden Scene" was being broadcast. Many of the microphones have been stripped of their cases to accomplish this result. Guards stationed in the wings and backstage prevented any unwanted noises, such as footsteps or whisperings, which might be picked up and sent out to the radio listeners.

Mr. Cross, the announcer, who was sent to Chicago especially for the occasion, went on the air at the beginning of the broadcast to set the tuneful stage for the listeners. Mr. Cross synopsized the plot of "Faust" with special emphasis on the "Garden Scene" and detailed the movements of the principal characters during this scene, so that members of the radio audience had no trouble in visualizing the action as it progressed.

SWEDISH PRINCE TO BE HEARD SUNDAY NIGHT

Will Broadcast Talk on America Over WEAF and Chain Stations

A voice of royalty will be heard by the radio audience when H. R. H. Prince William of Sweden will speak from the studio of WEAF on Sunday night, Jan. 23, from 9:05 o'clock until 9:15 o'clock. The talk will be carried through several chain stations those to be connected being WEAF, WEEI, WJAR, WTAG, WRC, WCAE, WWJ, KSD, WHAS, WSB and WSM.

The Prince's talk will be based on his impression of America and may also include some of his experiences while big game hunting and exploring in Africa.

The royal visitor, who is six feet, four inches in height, is a noted sailor, sportsman and author. He visited the United States for the first time in 1907 and aside from a brief two-day visit a few years since, has not been in New York City. For this reason probably the radio audience will be interested in his present impressions of America and New York City.

Fire Insurance

is something you take for granted—a protection every property owner should have.

But don't take too much for granted. Don't think that you can take out Fire Insurance and forget it except when premiums are due. You must ask yourself every year if your protection is still adequate, if changing property values, improvements and additions in your property, new equipment, etc., have not affected the efficiency of existing policies.

We will gladly help you take inventory of your risks.

Who knows? The next time is may be the Republicans who will be proclaiming: "He kept us out of war."

We haven't heard of any of New York City's morally unsanitary shows closing since Mayor Jimmy Walker made that clean-up gesture.

Naturally all the patriots who have not yet succeeded in getting their names on the state payroll appreciate the fact that the proposed state athletic commission, if it is authorized by law, will offer some more soft jobs.

A learned Buckeye editorial writer writes on "What To Do in China." What the foreigners in China manifestly are trying to do is to get out; and possibly it would have been just as well, if not better, had they never gone in.

Motorists are divided into two classes—the larger, made up of those who are considerate of pedestrians, and the smaller, composed of the mental misfits, who take delight in splashing muddy water over them.

The Chinese mobs which looted mission schools and other foreign properties are said to have been led by bobbed-haired girl students wearing horn-rimmed glasses. Isn't it just possible that China has had a trifle too much occidental education?

A Columbus story of yesterday said that nearly all of the drug stores of two of Ohio's principal cities are blind tigers, and to give those suffering from excessive thirsts a sort of a chart it was stated that the cities referred to were not Cincinnati, Columbus or Dayton. Any pronounced travel movements toward Lake Erie may now be understood.

Still a Decline in Passenger Traffic.

While there has been manifest improvement in railroad freight business in the last few years, railroad passenger business has shown a decline, and the year, 1926, in this respect was not an exception to the recent rule, although the decline last year was so small that railroad officials are hopeful that it is about at an end.

According to the current issue of the Railway Age the decrease last year was only about one per cent. However, there was an increase last year, as there has been every year since 1921, in travel in sleeping and parlor cars, the entire decline continuing to be in travel in day coaches.

The total railway passenger business, last year, was just about what it was twelve years ago in 1914. The first six years of this twelve-year period passenger business showed an increase yearly, the maximum being reached in 1920, but all the gain made in the first half of the period was lost in the succeeding six years. Such has been the decrease during the past six years that the railways made from their passenger business last year about $340,000,000 less earnings than they would have made had traffic been as it was in 1920.

"The declines in passenger business in different parts of the country," says the Railway Age editorially, "have presented almost as sharp contrasts as the increases in freight business. The losses have been due to motor competition, and chiefly to the increased use of private automobiles. It might be assumed that they have been relatively the largest in the densely-populated eastern territory, but this is not the case. The decline in eastern territory in the number of passengers carried one mile from 1920 to 1926 was about fifteen per cent.; in the southern territory, twenty-one per cent., and in western territory, thirty-seven per cent. Last year there was a small increase in eastern territory, a small decline in the South, and a still larger decline in the West."

These figures bear testimony to the congestion automobile traffic is causing on the highways of the more thickly-populated sections of the country, for the manifest explanation of the situation is that the highways of the thickly-settled sections of the country are so congested that people take to the railroads rather than chance the use of their cars. The more-thickly settled districts naturally have more automobiles. Hence the relatively small decline in railway passenger business during the last six years in the East and Central states compared with the decline in the South and West, where highway traffic is not so congested.

The Surrender of Our Rights.

It has been editorially intimated by one or two newspapers that the speech made by Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, to a gathering in the Hotel Astor, New York, Wednesday evening, was a bid for the Democratic nomination for the presidency. We are not in position to know the senator's purpose, nor do we care what moved him to speak as he did. Whatever his purpose, he uttered a great many truths which should be brought home to the people of this country. We were particularly impressed by the manner in which he brought out the wide departure we have made from our original scheme of government and his summarization of the rights which once were ours as citizens of this republic which we have surrendered. The sole purpose of government, he held, was the protection of the people of these rights. "Such was the doctrine of the fathers of the republic," he said, "such was the inspiration of the Declaration of Independence; such was the object of the revolution."

"How have we kept the faith?" the senator asked, and continued in answer to his own question:

"With congress desiring to have its will, regardless of the constitution, and with the courts indulging the presumption that congress was defending the constitution, the charter of our liberties was ground as between two millstones.

"A saturnalia of federal law-making began. Every legislature followed suit. When the first heat of the race was over and the legislative lords paused to take breath, the old maxim, 'that people is governed best which is governed least,' had been buried under a mass of statutes which sought to control, regulate, or coerce almost every activity of man.

"To enforce these innumerable laws, regulations, and rules a horde of officials, tax-gatherers, snoopers and spies swarm over the land like the lice of Egypt, devouring the substance of the people, prying into their private affairs, regulating their trade and business, and then poisoning their supply of alcohol.

"What wonder that the average man has come to regard the law as a sword of oppression, rather than a shield of protection?

"Is not the crying need of the hour the disbandment of useless boards, the repeal of unnecessary laws, the return to the states of their natural and just authority, to the end that we may bring the federal government back to its original simplicity?"

Is not the senator right? Is not the trend of the times centralization, centralization, centralization? Has not such been the trend for the last decade? Do we not see the same trend not only in state, but in municipal affairs as well? Counties are no longer permitted to manage their affairs. The state has taken over much of the job. Is not the state government sending its snoopers here, there and everywhere, prying into matters which should be the province of counties? At present there are snoopers engaged in many parts of the state increasing valuations for tax returns that there may be greater returns for dissipation by the tax-eaters. Is not the state also controlling many matters of municipal concerns which in the original scheme of things were never intended to come under its control?

The people of the country as a whole have remained supinely passive at the passage of this law or that—at times a federal law and again a state—until about all the liberties of which they once proudly boasted are gone?

It is a fact which is becoming generally recognized that, of all countries on the face of the earth, ours is the most cursed by a multiplicity of laws. We have laws by the thousands and hundreds of thousands. Laws without and beyond the understanding of any one citizen in all the land. It is a matter beyond dispute that some of them are so intricate and illy-drawn that even the members of our highest judicial body—the United States supreme court—admitted to be without a peer the world over, can not agree upon their meaning as made evident by divided findings.

All such laws should be cleared away and especially should all laws be wiped out which restrict the liberties of the people beyond our basic laws—the liberties which should be ours, liberties which we should be permitted to enjoy under the constitution. Our legislative bodies should be made to understand that they are the creatures—if the term creatures may be used—of the people and not the people theirs.

Poems That Live.

BUYING AND SELLING.

And when the night is spent, and morning come,
We rise and take the shutters from the shops,
And turn again to goods and bargaining,
We set the scale and bring the leaden weights;
Measure and cut and tie the careful string.
We count and fold, and calculate the cost,
And set the figures down upon a page.

Buying and selling is a gentle art
If it be gently practiced. All men know
Our daily bread is purchased at a price;
The friendly jug of wine, the pilgrim shoes;
The tunic and the cloak, the feathered cap;
The book of strange old tales, the jeweled ring;
The silken panel hanging on the wall;
The crystal cup, the alabaster jar—
Even the precious ointment; all these things
Are purchased at a price.

See to it, friend,
That in the traffic of the market-place
You sell not any portion of your dream—
Those things the stars have told you, and those things
The dark leaves whispered close above your head.
And when at evening time you count your gains,
Count, too, the understanding of a word,
Count merriment and singing; for I know
There is no price can pay you for the lack
Of laughter and delight. There is no price
No heap of golden coins can ever pay
For dearth of kindly hands and kindly eyes.

You call me fool and dreamer. And I say
Thank you, my friend. The dreamer and the fool,
Having naught else but folly, and his dream,
Will keep them to the end. Do you go on
Buying and selling in the market-place,
And I will sing my foolish little song.
That is not made for bargaining and trade,
But only for the other dreaming fools
Who stop and listen in the starry night."

—Barbara Young.

WHERE IS THAT INTERNATIONAL HEADACHE REMEDY?

Melody Lends to Well-Being.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

There can be no doubt that education in music adds to the happiness and general welfare of the individual. The rhythm and the pleasurable emotions excited by inspiring music have their effect upon the health. They lead to increased action of the heart and deeper breathing. In consequence, music improves the health and vigor of the individual.

Improved health comes, not alone from the increase of lung capacity from the blowing of a corpet or other wind instrument. It is a general sense of well-being and the stimulation associated with the enjoyment of music which have to do with the value of music.

The purpose of exercise is to stimulate the action of the heart. Pleasurable sensations will accomplish exactly the same result.

The reason one person who leads what is known as a sedentary life is well and vigorous, while another one is depressed and perhaps ready for the hospital, is because the first man is happy in his work. He gets out of his daily tasks the stimulation necessary to keep his heart functioning and his health good in consequence.

Another person is miserable and out of health because he is unhappy in his work. Life is mere drudgery and health is impaired as a natural consequence.

Where there is a love of music listening to it acts as a stimulant and promotes the general well-being. There is no doubt in my mind of its health-giving virtues.

Happiness, contentment and interest in every-day affairs are important considerations when we come to count the factors which make for health. Everything which contributes to mental peace adds to the prospect of long life.

It matters not whether it is a great orchestra, a famous band, a heart-reaching preacher, or the music of the birds. The whistling of the newsboy and the harsh music of the hurdy-gurdy are sweet to the ears of many who would not appreciate classical productions.

They are all the same. Whatever stirs the heart or sets the feet to marking time is doing mysterious things to the vital forces. Better health is set free in the body.

Some Questions of Interest Asked and Answered.

Q. Why is the United States public health service in the department of the treasury? L. A.

A. It really dates back to 1798, when congress passed an act for the relief of sick and disabled seamen. This small beginning accounts for the present location of the bureau in the treasury department, the customs service having always been closely connected with the treasury.

Q. Of what states were the records of the first census of 1790 lost? G. A. N.

A. A complete set of the schedules for each state with a summary for the counties and in many cases for the town of the first census was filed in the state department, but the records of Delaware, Georgia, Kentucky, New Jersey, Tennessee and Virginia were destroyed when the British burned the capitol during the War of 1812.

Q. What people wrote the first history? N. S.

A. The first historical narrative of considerable scope was produced by the Hebrews of ancient Palestine. The Babylonians and Assyrians had earlier historical writings, but they were not collected. These date back to the third millennium B. C.

Q. What was Rembrandt's first painting? C. T.

A. In the Stuttgart gallery there is a signed and dated picture of "St. Paul in Prison" which is Rembrandt's earliest piece with an ascertained date—1627.

Q. In a compositor's case which letter has the biggest box? H. T. F.

A. A pair of cases consists of an upper and a lower case. While the boxes in the cases are not exactly the same in all printing offices, it is the lower case "e" that has the largest box and that is placed directly in front of the compositor. This letter is the one most frequently used in the English language.

Q. Why isn't the Titanic raised? L. F. T.

A. Salvage experts have stated that it would be impossible to raise the Titanic. This is largely because its exact location is unknown. The vessel sank in one of the deepest parts of the Atlantic.

Q. Why is the Isle of Man so named? A. D.

A. The name is derived from its Manx name, Vannin or Mannin, which means the middle. The reference is to its position in the middle of the Irish sea.

Q. Does sunstroke only occur when the victim has been exposed to the sun? R. F. S.

A. The condition known as sunstroke may be produced in hot weather by exposure to high temperature not in the direct rays of the sun. This is particularly true if the person is engaged in hard work in close quarters.

Q. Who said: "Be sure you are right then go ahead?" D. K.

A. This is said to have been the maxim of David Crockett, American pioneer and statesman, who after much service was killed with four other survivors of the defense of the Alamo, by order of Santa Anna.

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

There is much talk about the morals and drinking habits of college students. Analyze any college home-coming or commencement crowd and you will find more hip flasks on the old grads, two to one, than on the students. It is without purpose and without profit to deplore the faults of others. Deplore your own.

Pity Doris Duke, poor little rich girl. She is only fifteen years old. Her father, dead tobacco king and college builder, left her $53,000,000. Among her toys are a Pullman car worth $35,000. The word "Doris" is gilded on its panelings. She has three magnificent motor cars and a stable of horses. She lives in New York, but she owns a 2,000-acre estate in New Jersey and a house in Newport.

There isn't the slightest doubt that this little school girl would rather run away to the movies with a little boy sweetheart than be watched by an army of governesses and servants in her lonely palace.

It matters little where our bodies are if we have the hearts of our friends to live in.

There is too much talk about short hours and short weeks and not enough talk about production. For a man employed at reasonable work for reasonable pay, eight hours of employment is a blessing and not a curse.

"How to live a life" is proposed as a new college course. That's a big order. How to live a life is the purpose of the whole education. It will take rare brains to teach that course.

The difference between banks lies in the amount and sincerity of friendly service rendered."

These interesting words were spoken by an unusual person. She is Miss Lily Hansen, vice president of a Chicago bank. Some years ago she began work in that bank as a ten-dollar-a-week stenographer. What she has proved herself to be is more important than what she says. Her lesson for banks is good. Her lesson for ten-dollar-a-week boys and girls is better.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, Jan. 22.—From midnight to dawn there is a manhattan madness the average New Yorker rarely sees. There is the rattle of dice and the click of roulette behind barred doors. Broadway side-streets spawn their dopes, crooks and sundry purveyors of vice.

Those dim-lit shady hotels which seem to crowse through the early evening begin at midnight to fill with gliding shadows. Bell boys flit out and back with booze and drugs. Sinister look-outs with hats pulled down appraise every visitor.

Times square and Columbus circle fill with haggard faces, alert and roving eyes, nyp taxicabs and all the unlovely brood of human buzzards. Thin dabs of light spray from the windows of old brown stone fronts—now mumbo speak-easy parlors.

Low-ceiled cellars with closely packed tables hum with a dozen languages. Taut and apparently awaiting the raider's ax. To the all-night lunches flock the tin horn sports, ball hoppers, women panderers, petty thieves and down-at-heel grafters.

They munch, scrunch and mumble. Children of the night—furtive, pasty-faced and living hard. Along dock resorts are the sailors and scheming women who send them back to their ship with aching heads and empty purses.

Down in Chinatown's underground catacombs at midnight they begin dreaming away the sodden night in a thousand poppy fancies. In Chinese restaurants is that subdued gaiety of those steeped in vice and searching for a pleasure they cannot find.

Only those who have studied the New York night know its hideousness. It is peopled with figures day never sees. They are not the figures of brilliant cafes and supper clubs. It is a motley, nocturnal crew vanishing with dawn to God knows where.

"But will you take her back this time?" asked the manager.

"Sure, I always take her back," he replied "she's a dandy performer."

An anthologist of New York will some day indite a fitting panegyric to the railroad station "red caps" not only of the metropolis, but elsewhere. Their harassing duties never strike politeness. And he bowed and trotted away whistling.—Copyrighted, 1927.

Dinner Stories.

A man with a look of business on his face came to a hotel-keeper, and asked him if he would buy two carloads of frogs' legs.

"Two carloads!" said the man, in amazement. "Why, I could no use them in twenty years!"

"Well, will you buy a half a carload?"

"No."

"Twenty or thirty bushels?"

"No."

"Twenty or thirty dozen?"

"No."

"Two dozen?"

"Yes."

A few days later the man returned with three pairs of legs.

"Is that all?" asked the hotel keeper.

"Yes; the fact is that I live near a pond, and the frogs made so much noise that I thought there were millions of them. But I dragged the pond with a seine, drained it and raked it, and there were only three frogs in the whole place."

"Well, sah," replied Rastus, "it's dis way. I likes to take an active part as I used to pass de collection basket, but dey's give de job to Brothah Green, who jest returned from Ovah Thai-ah."

"In recognition of his heroic service, I suppose?"

"No, sah, I reckon he got dat job in recognition of his having lost one o' his hands."

"Now boys," said the teacher, "can any of you tell me how iron was first discovered?"

A hand shot up. "Yes, sir!" cried Thompson.

"Well, Thompson, just tell the class what your information is on that point."

"Please, sir," replied the scholar, "I heard father say yesterday that they smelt it!"

BY WILL ROGERS

It's so fun to have to lie awake at night when you ought to be sleeping. I reckon there's nothing that can worry a person more than not being able to sleep. And still, even the people that have the most trouble with insomnia will tell you that one reason they can't sleep is that they worry so much about not sleeping. A guy can keep himself awake most any time, just trying to go to sleep, and working at it real hard.

Well, the doctors get tormented a good deal by people with insomnia, I guess. I was told about a doctor that had a patient that said he had tried everything, and couldn't sleep at night.

"What do you do for a living?" the doc asked.

"I'm a bookkeeper."

"Well, keep right on bookkeeping. You won't have to change your job if your imagination is good. Is it?"

"Best imagination in the country."

"All right, you're fixed. At 9 p. m. start imagining that you're a night watchman, and you won't have any more trouble.—Copyright, 1927.

New England Greets Old England in Phone Service

BOSTON, Jan. 22—"New England greets the land from which her hardy pioneers came forth and hails the people that taught those pioneers."

A.L. LOWELL

President A. Lawrence Lowell, of Harvard University, was speaking today to Rev. G. A. Weeks, vice chancellor of Cambridge University, England, inaugurating a New England-to-old England telephone service.

Messages between the presidents of the two great universities of the old world and the new came through clear and distinct.

Following the opening of the service, phone calls from eight other persons wishing to talk with Londoners were put through at the rate of $75 a call, and $25 for every extra minute, the English service being limited to an area of 110 miles about London.

EMPRESS CHARLOTTE IS LAID TO REST TODAY

Requiem High Mass Sung by Prelate; Peasants Line Road

Brussels, Jan. 22—Empress Charlotte, widow of Maximilian of Austria and for a brief time emperor of Mexico, was laid to rest today in the royal crypt of the church at Laeken, on the outskirts of Brussels. Within the same crypt lie the remains of Belgium's first two kings. A requiem mass was celebrated by Monsignor Vanroey.

King Albert and Queen Elizabeth with members of the royal household attended the ceremonies and there was a large delegation from the diplomatic corps.

The brass plate upon the mahogany coffin was inscribed: "Her Majesty Marie Charlotte, Princess of Belgium and Widow of His Imperial Majesty, the Archduke Maximilian of Austria, Emperor of Mexico."

Snow fell during the funeral but this did not prevent the Belgian peasants from turning out en masse and lining the five-mile route from Chateau Bouchot to Laeken Cathedral.

forces have defeated Feng Yuh Siang's armies southwest of Hsibatow on the Yangtse, taking thousands of prisoners and much Russian ammunition.

In a message to The Daily Express, Chang Tso Lin announces his intention of wiping out the "Bolshevist elements" in China.

"Hitherto internecine warfare has been the cause of unrest in China," said Chang Tso Lin. "However, Bolshevistic elements, puppets in the hands of a certain power, have in the disguise of patriotism attempted to upset order in the nation, to stir up ill feeling between China and the powers—I have decided to wipe out these disturbing elements—

"I am confident that our military power is quite sufficient to defeat these elements."

GOVERNMENT GROWS ALARMED ABOUT CHINA

Washington, Jan. 22—Consideration of questions concerning extraterritoriality and other treaty relations with China have temporarily been swept into the background by this government in view of the extremely grave situation which has arisen as the result of anti-foreign demonstrations at Hankow, Foochow and other towns in the Yangtse Valley.

Within the last 48 hours this government has become highly alarmed over the turn of affairs and is now taking extraordinary preparations to protect its own interests as well as those of the 12,000 American residents in China.

Whatever American forces are used for the protection of American interests will concentrate their activities in the neighborhood of Shanghai, where the largest single community of Americans is located. Information has reached here to the effect that Shanghai is the next objective on the program of Chinese agitators who have been directing the anti-foreign demonstrations.

Evacuation Continues

Meanwhile the evacuation of interior cities and some ports by Americans continues unchecked. The wives and children of missionaries and the families of business men stationed in the interior are traveling to Shanghai. Foochow, Amoy and Chunking and from there are being transferred to ships bound for Manila and other ports.

For the most part the men are remaining behind in the Chinese cities, having signified their intention of staying with their business.

No increase in the American naval force of the United States in Chinese waters is contemplated, it was said here today, inasmuch as the fighting, if any becomes necessary, will have to be carried on by land forces.

Forces of 7,934

More than 40 war craft of various kinds are now in China and these carry a total complement of 7,934 officers and men. Besides this force the United States has 500 marines stationed at Pekin, 238 at Cavite, 288 on their way to Cavite from Guam, 400 at Pearl Harbor and 50 at Clongpo, Philippines, all available for immediate service. A battalion of 400 marines is also awaiting orders at San Diego, Calif. America has about 900 regular soldiers in China, but under the present treaty these infantrymen can be used only to defend the Pekin-Tientsin Railway.

More than 4,000 Americans have their homes and business in Shanghai, located in the protince of Kiangsu, which at this time is under the military control of Sun Chuan-Fang, an independent war lord. Inasmuch as all of the anti-foreign outbreaks have thus far been confined to territory under the control of the Cantonese it is hoped that Sun's continued control of Kiangsu will serve to protect Americans in Shanghai. Information has reached Washington, however, that the Cantonese armies under Chang Kai-Shek are sweeping over the western end of Kiangsu and are momentarily expected to attack Shanghai.

The United States, it was said at state department, has entered into no formal arrangement with the other powers for concerted action in checking mob violence or in defending the foreign concessions. It is known, however, that the naval and military commanders on the scene of action will act jointly upon the advice of diplomatic representatives, if such a step becomes necessary. This procedure was followed in suppressing the Boxer uprising in 1900.

PITTSBURGH HIT BY FLOOD WATERS

Pittsburgh, Jan. 22—Swollen by continued rains over the water sheds of the Allegheny and Monongahela Rivers, their high tides sweeping into the Ohio River at Point Bridge here today reached a depth of 27.3 feet, more than two feet over flood height, inundating cellars and causing residents to seek higher ground.

Fed by the heavy rains, the rivers continued to rise, and indications were the tide would reach a point near the mark set in May, 1924, when thousands of dollars damage resulted here.

Melting ice in the Upper Allegheny River, and warm rains during the last week brought the river levels to the danger point yesterday, and weather men had hoped the rise would be halted by cessation of the rains yesterday afternoon. Night, however, brought a warm, driving rain, and the rivers continued to rise. There was no indication of impending letup today.

Warnings were broadcast to residents of the district and to rivermen, the latter hurrying to make their boats secure against the sweeping tide.

COSHOCTON NEARLY BLOCKED BY FLOOD

Coshocton, Jan. 22—Roads to Zanesville were practically the only outlet this city had today following the overflowing of the Muskingum River. The river is five feet above flood stage and it is feared the backwater will creep into the lower section of the town. A light rain continued to fall throughout the day.

no comparison in the conditions of the streets, he said, nor in their use by traffic. Columbia-at, he pointed out, starts nowhere and goes nowhere, as a main artery. It cannot be used by through traffic without going blocks out of the way.

Center-st Direct Route

W. Center-st, he said, is the direct route of traffic from the west side to the east side. Columbia-st, he believes, could stand another year of use, without resurfacing, while W. Center-st is now practically beyond repair.

The widening project, which has been under discussion for several years, involves changing the width of W. Center-st, from Oak-st west, from 45 feet to 60 feet, the same width of the street as from Oak-st east. This would involve only the setting back of the curb line, it is pointed out, and would not mean narrowing of sidewalks or moving of any present buildings. Paving and widening will be handled as one job, if either is approved.

Church-st Burdened

A heavy burden has been thrown on Church-st by the rapid disappearance of the pavement on W. Center-st the merchants say. Instead of bumping over the ridges of W. Center-st trucks and machines turn south and travel Church-st through the city, and the effect of this heavy traffic is being shown on the Church-st pavement, the merchants say. Their point is that by not improving W. Center-st city officials are turning traffic onto Church-st, it will be worn out soon, and the city will have two ruined streets to improve.

BROTHERS PLEAD NOT GUILTY TO THEFT CHARGES

Arthur and John Erwin Arraigned; Malcolm Larkin Still Held

Arthur Erwin, 20, and John Erwin, 18, of 386 Chestnut-st, brothers arrested with Malcolm Larkin, 17, of 462 Mary-st, as suspects in connection with a series of robberies committed here during the last 90 days, pleaded not guilty when arraigned in Municipal Court this morning and are out on bond awaiting preliminary hearings at 10 o'clock Monday morning.

Young Larkin, whose age necessitated transferring his case to Juvenile Court, is held at the Juvenile Detention Home on Wallace-st pending arraignment on a burglary charge.

Municipal Judge Martin fixed Arthur Erwin's bond at $3,000 and John's at $5,000. Both furnished bond and returned to their home after having been detained at the City Prison since their arrest early Thursday morning.

Serious Charge

John Erwin faces a more serious charge than his brother and for that reason a larger bond was fixed in his case. John is accused in an affidavit filed by Chief of Police Thompson, of "aiding and abetting in the burglarizing of an inhabited dwelling," the penalty for which is imprisonment of from five years to life. It is alleged that a revolver stolen from the Robert S. Hamor home on Mary-st the night of Jan. 1 was found in his possession.

The affidavit filed against Arthur charges him with "entering an uninhabited storehouse or warehouse in the night season with intent to steal." The penalty for this offense is imprisonment of from one to 15 years. The burglary referred to in this affidavit was committed at the filling station operated by LeRoy Retter on Mt. Vernon-av near the east corporation line on the night of Dec. 21. Larkin is accused in connection with the Retter burglary, affidavits against him and Arthur Erwin having been sworn to by Retter.

Claim Tires Found

It is alleged that auto tires and a shot-gun taken from the Retter place were found in the boys' possession.

Police allege that Larkin and Arthur Erwin have confessed staging the Retter and Hamor robberies and also that they also admitted a number of minor thefts in which they are alleged to have obtained automobile tires and accessories. The not guilty pleas made by the Erwin boys today, however, indicate that they intend to make a fight for acquittal. They have retained Homer E. Johnson as their attorney.

HERE'S MORE ABOUT
CITY FUNDS

ances were not entirely used is shown in the cash surplus remaining on Dec. 31, councilmen say.

Following is a list of appropriations for 1927, including the amounts set aside as contingent accounts, and a comparison with appropriations made for last year:

General Fund: Council $1,550; clerk of council $2,175; mayor $2,000; auditor $3,000; treasurer $800; solicitor $4,880; civil service commission $410; humane officer's salary $900; election expense $3,500; legal advertising $1,500; Municipal Court $12,415; contingent fund $9,752.07; total $42,612.07.

$11,457.07 Increase

This is an increase of $11,457.07 over the general fund total last year but from this, according to the council finance committee's explanation, should be deducted the contingent account of $9,752.07. Figuring in the remaining difference is the Municipal Court expense and a reduction of $8,080 in the appropriation for election costs.

The Municipal Court appropriation, heavier this year than it will be in the future because of this being its first year of operation, is divided as follows: judge's salary, $2,000; stationery and printing $3,115; incidentals and equipment $1,315; clerks and assistants $5,800; jury and witness fees, $1,500; total $12,415. The judge receives $4,000 a year, the city paying $2,000, the county $1,500 and the township, $500.

Public safety fund: General administration $1,300; signal lights $500; police department $32,900; fire department $57,380; fire and police telephone and telegraph $250; contingent $7,261.63; total $99,591.63.

This is an increase of $12,466.63 but deduction of the contingent fund leaves a net raise of only $5,205, which represents the approximate increase in pay proposed for police and firemen.

Health Fund

Public health fund: General administration $7,625; sanitary service and inspection $1,881; quarantine, $681; contingent $220.06; total $10,307.06. This shows an increase of $291.41 over last year.

Public service fund: General administration $5,963.33; engineering $5,420; sidewalk repairs $2,000; street lighting $20,800; garbage collection, not included in the city garbage department $2,040; sewers, ditches and drains $900; flushing sewers $3,104.05; hydrant rentals $21,000; public buildings and lands $7,000; total $77,577.08.

Not Handicap

This list of appropriations, totalling $5809.55 less than last year's allowance, indicates that the public service department is likely to be handicapped from lack of funds during 1927 more than any other department. No appropriation is made for street cleaning, which does not forecast much of a change, however, as only $800 was set aside for this purpose last year. From the service fund must be paid the increase in city office rent and also the cost of flushing sewers, money for which is paid to the Marion Water Co. under the terms of its new franchise. The appropriation for fire hydrant rentals of $1,000 higher than last year.

Hospital Fund

City hospital fund: Operating fund, $51,700; contingent $8,563.39; total $60,273.39. This is an increase of $9,379.81 over the 1926 appropriation but most of this is in the contingent account. As the hospital is now practically self-sustaining, any additional expenditure for its operation will not have an effect on tax bills.

City garbage collection service: General expenses $10,230, an increase of $3,430 over last year. This department is not only self-sustaining but is yielding a profit for the city, officials state.

Park Costs

Public parks: General expenses $1,243.06. This appropriation is $2,330.51 less than last year's allowance. The $1,243.06 set aside for 1927 is the balance which stood in the fund at the close of last year, no tax levy having been made for parks.

Poor relief fund: General expense $3,980, an increase of $980 over last year.

In addition to these appropriations, it is estimated that $42,000 will be received during 1927 from the state auto license and gasoline tax collections for use in street maintenance and repairs. This money can be used for no other purpose and is not included in the list of appropriations.

The city closed last year in excellent condition financially, aside possibly from the sinking fund, officials say. Difficulty may develop in the sinking fund should collection of special assessments for paving bonds and interest fall short. Because of this prospect, City Treasurer Asa Queen recently sent a communication to Council urging a program of strictest economy for 1927.

Total Revenue

The amount of revenue estimated for all municipal government purposes here during 1927, including payment of bonds and interest from the sinking fund, totals $725,886.86. A statement of the estimated receipts together with unincumbered balances on hand at the beginning of the year, is as follows:

General fund: balance at beginning of year $15,612.07; estimated receipts from taxes $22,000; from other sources $5,000; total $128042.07.

Public safety fund: balance $12,591.63; taxes $70,000; other sources $11,000; total $99,591.63.

Public health fund: balance $2,307.06; taxes $8,000; other sources $2,200; total $10,507.06.

Public service fund: balance $14,577.08; taxes, $62,000; other sources $1,000; total $77,577.08.

Hospital fund: balance $18,173.50; taxes $11,700; other sources $30,000; total $59,873.50.

Firemen's indemnity fund: taxes $3,400.

Poor relief fund: balance $1,384.55.

Street maintenance and repair fund: auto licenses and gasoline tax $42,000.

Sinking fund: general taxes $230,000; special assessments $120,000; total $350,000.

Parks: balance $1,245.06.

Sewage treatment works: balance $412.37; tax $16,000; total $16,412.37.

Helpful Hints
Fashion's Decree
Pimentos

BY EDNA DUTTON

DISPENSERS of helpful hints warm the cockles of one's heart with their delightful world pictures of the proper attire for the successful business girl, or the attractive garb for the housewife during her hours in the kitchenola, but why, oh, why, doesn't some one come forth with a timely suggestion on how to look even presentable when one is in the throes of an acute cold. Any one able to deliver the goods along this line to my mind would deserve more sheckels than a half dozen channel swimmers. There's no use getting around it, wreck is the only word to describe the looks of the cold victim. The downward trend starts when you just can't sneeze any more and the tears literally run out of your eyes. Then it's a chase to the medicine chest and by the time you emerge from the bathroom you look like a cross between a football player and a defeated prizefighter. There certainly is nothing fetching about the trappings one must don for the siege. One's chest takes on the contour of a pouter pigeon and who, even though they devote a lifetime to it could design a flannel rag that would add to the lines of one's neck, be it long or abbreviated. Even one's hair, unless it is of the rebellious curly kind that absolutely refuses to be downhearted, sinks in spirit and sags in a sympathetic manner about the ears. There's nothing left for the poor sufferer except a retreat with the camphor, grease and other aids to the nethermost wing of the house and there's no doubt but that such a course would be doubly welcome to the free members of the household who can not help but feel relieved at not hearing the one, two, three of the sniff, bark and whoop.

The lofty-acting pimento which has occupied an enviable place in culinary art as a garnish must come down off its perch and acknowledge its relations to the lowly allspice for those who profess to know have delved into its genealogy and come forth with the word that they are one and the same. The name allspice, so they say, is given the berries of the pimento tree, a beautiful evergreen related to the myrtle family. The tree flowers twice a year, bearing pink blossoms, but yield only one crop of berries. As a solace to its injured feelings however the pimento may claim the distinction of being the only largely used spice which is a native of the Western Hemisphere, as most of their tribe come from the other side of the world.

Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews, assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of prohibition, will address the conference, as will, also, Dr. A. W. Doran, chief chemist of the prohibition unit, the man in charge of the much discussed "poison formula."

Miss Anna A. Gordon, president of the World W. C. T. U., will have a prominent place on the program.

Other women leaders who will speak are Mrs. Nellie Burger, Springfield, Mo., president of the Missouri W. C. T. U.; Mrs. Ida B. Wise-Smith, Des Moines, vice president of the national W. C. T. U., and officially designated by the governor of Iowa as one of the ten most useful citizens in that state.

Mrs. Margaret B. Munns, Evanston, Ill., national treasurer; Mrs. Francis B. Parks, national recording secretary, who specializes in organization; Miss Cora Frances Stoddard, Boston, Mass., who is said to be one of the world's leading women authorities on the scientific aspects of prohibition, temperance, etc.; Mrs. Adrianna Hungerford, Denver, Col., president of the Colorado branch of the organization; Mrs. Maude Perkins of Syracuse, head of the Young People's Branch of the W. C. T. U., and Mrs. Lenna Lowe Yost, Washington, D. C., legislative director for the body, the "dry lobbyist," also chairman of the committee in charge of the conference.

The W. C. T. U. claims an actual membership of 600,000 women —most of them housewives and mothers. It believes that the national prohibition law needs strengthening and while in Washington will devote its attention to that phase of the situation.

Rogers Reports on Baseball Hearing in Chicago

Tragic Air Prevails In Trial Room

Beverly Hills Mayor Finds More Tragedy Than Comedy in Scene

By WILL ROGERS

I WAS passing through Chicago a short time ago and had to spend the day there on my way back east to try and horsswoggle the easterners out of enough to make some payments on Beverly Hills Real estate and Claremore acreage.

I had read that there was to be a baseball investigation in Judge Landis office that day. I went up there and as it wasent billed to start for an hour or so I went in and had a private chat for over an hour with the Judge. We had met and spoken together at several dinners in the good old free eats days in N. Y. He seeme very anxious to know what I had heard of the feeling in regard to all the baseball talk there had been. I think he tries to get views from all he talks to and see what the fans are thinking.

He explained to me that lots of people had wondered why a thing like this had to be dragged out after it had happened 10 years ago. He said "It's this eternal underground whispering and interferences. Some one is always bringing it up, and as it has come to a head why there is nothing left for me to do but have an investigation and see just what the truth is."

No Choice for Landis

He said that he had no choice in the matter, that he was paid and expected to keep the game clean and above board and he certainly wanted to prove just where it stood. He is a very likeable forceful old character, got a world of magnetism and I guess as fearless as they make 'em.

Well, it was a kind of a funny feeling to me sitting there, just waiting for One Thirty to come, when Swede Risberg, the old Chicago shortstop, was to come in and tell a story that was supposed to brand both Chicago and the Detroit teams of 1917 as nothing more than crooks. Well, I had known Risberg for years. I had known Chick Gandil, and I had known personally for years almost every player that he was supposed to brand as dishonest.

Knew Detroit First

Detroit was one of the first ball teams I ever become well acquainted with. I was a friend of Hughey Jennings and Ty Cobb and have sit on the bench during games (when we knew the Umpire well and could get away with it, as you are not allowed too.) I felt the hour creeping on and I went out of the Judge's private room where the investigation was to be held, and went out in the anti-room. Some of the boys were gathering in. Here was men that I hadn't seen in years. Some now out of the big Leagues, and I had lost track of them: some of them, out of baseball entirely. Here they were 10 years after, being put on trial for their honor and reputation. There was a few laughs and cheerful greetings, but there was too much at stake, there was too much drama in it to be very humorous.

Ty Cobb come in, (outside of Speaker perhaps one of my best personal friends in baseball.) Tris had traveled with me though Texas last year when I was stumping his state for my election as Mayor of Beverley Hills. He grabbed my hand and he said, "Will, ain't this terrible? Here I have given over 20 years of the best part of my life to a game that I love next to my own family, and now I am suspicioned as being a crook!"

Tears Fit In

It was in this crowded little anti room that he said it with dozens in listening distance that heard it, and tears come into his eyes. He dident try to hide 'em, and he dident care who heard him or seen them, and they dident seem out of place, because they were just under the eyelids of every ball player in that room. Right by us stood Eddie Collins, as high a type man as ever graced any business in the world. Kid Gleason, old and grizzled, who had given an entire lifetime to the game, the scrappiest ball player that ever pulled on a baseball glove; Big Ed Walsh who did more for years and years to keep Chicago's name in decent print than all the Murders and crooks have to keep its doings in the obituary column. He was called by mistake.

All the sporting writers were there that had sit for years and watched these same boys play ball day after day, traveled with 'em on the road. Now they were there to go in and instad of sending back a box score reporting the skill and daring pleasure, and amusement that they were giving thousands of people that day, they were to wire to their papers that these boys were being branded as crooks, and had been cheating the people and had not been giving fair measure for their admission price.

In Landis' Office

Finally we all crowded into Landis's office all that could get in. Risberg had come and was ready to repeat his story. Here he was facing men that he knew every one of them, he had played with and against them for years, yet there was no sign of recognition. He told his story exactly as it had been reported he would tell it. The whole thing only involved one thing. He claimed they gave the Detroit pitchers a purse for letting Chicago beat them four games. The 34 other men who testified claimed that they gave it for the good work that Detroit Pitchers did against Boston (who was Chicago's nearest competitor). Risberg and Gandil had been thrown out of baseball. Chicago did win the four games, and also the purse was raised and paid.

I don't think Risberg meant when he made the original remark that he would ever have to tell the story. But when he was called on it, he went through and stuck to it. I don't think it was as deliberate as some would think. It was just that old bottled up hate against everything that made him think he hadent had a square deal in the game, and he exaggerated this incident. I really believe that he would give anything now if it had never come up at all.

No Comedy

Now I know that I am supposed to report some comedy with things that come along under my observation. Well I dident see any. It wasent funny to see thirty-four men that I had known personally and that had given from 10 to 20 years of healthful amusement and recreation to millions, be on trial practically for their lives. There was a few laughs come up now and again in the same testimony. But they were mighty hollow ones.

You never thought you would live to see the day that Eddie Collins, as game a fighter as ever lived, would break. But I want to tell you the most dramatic moment I ever saw in either court room or stage was when he even produced his check book to show the stub where he had given Gandil the money. He threw it on Landis desk and said "There is where I payed the money, and any man that says I did it for a thrown ball game, or that I ever knowingly participated in a crooked game in my life is a——————". And he broke so that if they hadent been swear words, they were the only ones that would have come out. It was from the heart, so the Judge dident even admonish him for it.

Their Wives and Children

Here they were most of them practically finishing their baseball careers, and Lord knows it's hard enough for an athlete to adapt himself to some other business, their reputations questions just when they needed them most. Most all of them with families, some with almost grown up children. They wasent defending themselves personally. It was their wives and children.

Judge Landis gave the only decision he could give in the case. It was just and fair. The whole thing will do good and not harm. Baseball fans know these men are not crooked. They give their moneys' worth too much every day to be doing something crooked. Baseball is the greatest game in the world, for the greatest number of people. And it's the least crooked sport ever invented. And I am going to go to it, and believe in it, and admire the type of men that play it, till I get so old that my whiskers will get caught in the turnstiles.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 20 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, just a healing, soothing vegetable laxative mixed with olive oil.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver— constipation, you'll find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take them every night to keep right. Try them. 15c, 30c, 60c. —Adv.

The Little White Hag

BY FRANCIS BEEDING

BY LITTLE, BROWN AND CO. RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSN

CHAPTER TWENTY

I stood for a moment, utterly dismayed and a little shaken. I could do no good, however, by standing still in the middle of the street, and I started off again, almost as in a nightmare, for the convent. Strangely enough, I did not once think of returning. The road behind me seemed even more unfriendly than the road in front. The yellow face of the man on the motor bicycle and the mysterious breakdown of the cars had, I suppose, made a deeper impression on me than I had imagined; and, though my protector had suddenly vanished from the world, I still went forward.

Then, all at once, it seemed to me that the street became more crowded. Besides the peasant women with baskets on their arms, I noticed that there were occasional groups of loutish youths, who looked as though they might be fresh from the plow. My attention was particularly engaged by a group of four, who were drinking at a small cafe on the right-hand side of the road. As I passed the cafe one of them rose and said a word to the others.

I passed on, but, hearing footsteps behind me, looked over my shoulder and saw the four of them walking slowly up the village street in my rear with linked arms. Other groups loitered along the way I had come, and I noticed that they were all attentively observing the conduct of the four immediately behind me.

I heard a burst of laughter, then a sudden silence, then one of them struck up a song. They did not in the least attempt to molest me, but I felt sure that their attention was upon me, and that if I attempted to retrace my steps they would have found means to prevent it.

In order to test this impression I stopped and looked for a moment in the window of a little store in the village street. The four men were almost upon me before they could stop, but they nevertheless drew up behind me and affected to hold a lively conversation in the middle of the road. The same thing happened when I repeated the maneuver about twenty yards farther along the street. Though their behavior was creditably natural, their movements were quite unmistakably concerted. Moreover, the second time I could not help noticing the man who had been the first to call a halt on both occasions. He too was dressed as a plowman, but he had an indoor look, and his hands were white and smooth.

I now had no doubt at all that these men were in the service of the gang, and I was compelled to admire its efficiency. I had set out from Geneva with two cars and followed by two detectives. I was now alone, on foot and wholly unprotected, with all my communications cut.

By now I had come to the end of the village, and looking to my right I saw a long stone building with one or two barred windows giving on the road and a door set in the middle of the wall. Above the door was a small statue of the Virgin and Child. I paused a moment, and as I did so a little girl passed me. I asked her if this was the convent of the religieuses. She replied that it was. I went up and rang the bell.

I looked, as I did so, at the group of yokels behind me. They broke up as I waited on the doorsteps. Two went forward up the road, the other two turned and went back on their tracks, reaching, while I was still waiting for the door to open, the cafe which they had previously left.

At that moment the door opened and I found myself face to face with a smiling old nun, dressed in a blue and white habit with a great starched cap.

"Monsieur desire?" she inquired.

I asked her if it was here that the washing was done for the Hotel du Lac.

"But yes, Monsieur," she said, "the washing of the Hotel du Lac, the Metropole, the Touring et Balance, and several Pensions in Geneva."

"Then, Madam," I said, "perhaps you will be good enough to collect the washing from room number 114 of the Hotel du Lac. I am the person who has hired the room, and I have unexpectedly to leave Geneva. I should, therefore, be grateful if I could have my linen, whether it is ready or not, immediately."

"Certainly, Monsieur, replied the nun, and motioned me to enter.

I walked down a small stone passage. The nun opened a door and I found myself in a musty parlor giving on to a small courtyard on which long lines of clean linen were drying in the sunshine.

"If Monsieur will wait," said the nun, and she left the room.

I sat there alone and cudgeled my brains. I felt by this time convinced that I should not be allowed to get very far with the handkerchief once I had quitted the convent. Those men in the village were waiting for me, and there were I knew not how many dangers to be met on the way back to Geneva. The events attending my arrival in Ferney had filled me with a sense of secret and unerring pursuit that made my ultimate capture almost inevitable. I felt that to walk out into the village of Ferney with the handkerchief in my pocket would be equivalent to handing it over to the Center himself.

I rose and approached the widow, gazing idly at the flapping linen outside. Presently I noticed attached to one of the many drying lines two or three women's handkerchiefs, of a kind very much like the one which I had picked up, and for which I had come. A sudden though struck me. I stealthily opened the window and, keeping an eye on the door of the room, made a long arm and plucked the nearest handkerchief off the line. Then I closed the window and sat down again, folding the handkerchief up carefully and putting it in my pocketbook.

A few minutes later the old nun reappeared, carrying a small parcel of collars and underlinen which I recognized as belonging to myself.

"There you are, Monsieur," she said, "all is ready except this lady's handkerchief, which we have not yet had time to wash. We could perhaps send it to Monsieur."

"No, no," I said hastily, "you had better give it to me now. I don't quite know what my address will be."

"Very well, Monsieur," she said, and handed me the little handkerchief which I had tied round my cut finger barely twenty-four hours before.

"Thank you, Madam," I said.

Then, as if a sudden thought had struck me, I continued, "Have you such a thing as an envelope and a pen?"

"But certainly Monsieur," she replied.

She went to a small table standing at one side of the room and produced pens, ink and paper.

I took the handkerchief which she had given me, and folding it up placed it in the largest envelope I could find. Inside the flap I wrote: "They are after me, I think. I enclose what you require."

I addressed it to Madam Claypole, at the house in Geneva where I had spent the previous night, 2 bis rue du Degre des Poules.

"Madam," I said, "I have changed my mind and I should be grateful if you would send the handkerchief by post, even though it is not washed. The lady to whom it belongs awaits it urgently."

"Certainly, Monsieur," she said.

I handed her the envelope, and taking up the washing which she had been busily wrapping in a small paper parcel, I paid the bill and followed her up the stone passage, and so out into the road again.

I looked rapidly to right and left. The road was empty, and the peasants were nowhere to be seen. There was nothing moving excepting one mongrel dog, lazily scratching himself in a patch of sunlight.

I turned to the left and walked briskly down the street in the direction which I had come. I had not, however, gone more than fifty yards when I heard the sound of wheels.

I turned around. A car was approaching me from behind. It was just slowing down, preparatory to a halt.

As I watched it, wondering what surprise it might have in store for me, it stopped and a person stepped lightly down.

Quicksands of Love

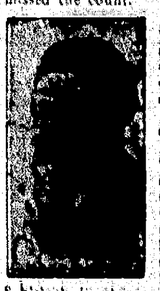
Lillian Admits Suspicions

LILLIAN rose from the kitchenette table after repeated helpings of the Welsh rabbit I had prepared for her, and so many cups of coffee that I missed the count.



"Now," she said with a contented grin, "I feel like a benevolent anaconda. I think I shall call it a day."

"Yes, and you'll sleep like a top," I said resentfully, "whereas almost anybody else in the world would walk the floor all night after a dose like that. But that's you all over. Eat nothing from 8 o'clock in the morning until midnight, and then gorge on Welsh rabbit and coffee."

"Of course," she said, drawing her mouth down dolefully, "if you begrudge me the few mouthfuls I eat—"

"I don't," I said laughing at her nonsense, "but I do envy your ability to do all these fool stunts and put any daisy in the corner with his face to the wall afterward. You don't even have to worry about reducing."

"No, I must say I've kept my figure," she said with a sidewise glance at herself, and so faithful an imitation of a complacent but irritating woman we both knew and disliked that in a burst of laughter I gave up in despair any attempt to show her the mistake of her gustatorial habits.

"And now I'm going to prove to you that I'm not the secretive sweet cat you've thought me for the last twenty-four hours.

"I haven't," I began, but my protest died beneath the keen mirth of her eyes.

"Don't bother to deny it," she said. "But remember that I don't blame you in the least. You were justified in calling me all the names in the calendar and then adding a few for good measure. But you know me when I'm on a job. I simply can't talk it over with anybody, even you."

I nodded, for, indeed, I knew well the idiosyncrasy—amounting almost to an eccentricity—of which she spoke. It's one which has annoyed me many times in my work with her, but which I endured and pardoned because I know both the value of her work and the raw she drives herself in it. She will neither eat nor sleep when she is working upon any problem whether it pertains to government work, to her own affairs, or, as in the case for which she was apologizing, to the welfare of a friend.

"I'm going to tell you all about what I've been doing from beginning," she said. "And I frankly admit I'm puzzled. I don't very often come a flyer like this upon clues which I have worked out so carefully.

She stopped and eyed me oddly.

"Do you know," she resumed, "that until you satisfied yourself that Mary was in her bed tonight I was sure that she was the masked dancer at the night club! Now all my theories are knocked sky high—and higher."

Ashland High Forges to Front in N. C. O. Loop Race by Beating Galion, 27-10

Victors Best Squad Yet Seen on Crawford County Floor; Skill in Long Shots from Difficult Angles Accounts for Many Points

Galion, Jan. 22—Ashland High forged ahead in the N. C. O. League race last night when it finished a fast and well-played game, victor by a 27-10 score. Although in the first minutes of play it seemed possible that the Galion players might have a chance to take their second league game, the Ashland athletes soon caught their scoring stride and remained ahead by a gratifying margin.

The smiling basketeers were without doubt the most capable and alert bunch of players that the locals have opposed. Excelling in team work, passing and shooting the Ashland outfit had an easy time of snatching another game in its championship race, not during the contest changing the pace set as the game opened. Skill in making long shots from difficult angles accounted for many of the winner's points and the defensive work of the guards succeeded in keeping the Galionites continually annoyed.

The inexperience of the home team was more evident than ever before but special commendation must be made for the plucky fight waged from start until finish. A fine spirit exists among team members this year and it can be said of every player that he gave the best he had. Captain Rhinehart, Cutschall, Zinn, Marshall, Hersher, Schupp and Sawyer were seen in action and the flashes of real basketball seen at intervals made fans hopeful for future games.

Good Girls' Game

As an opener the game between the G. H. S girls' varsity and alumni sextet was one of the best exhibitions of the girls' game that has yet been seen on a local court. The varsity won, 25 to 21. The alumni team was composed of the best players that have graduated within the last several years and although having only one practice together, played with unusual speed and worked together splendidly.

Three former captains of high school teams were in the lineup: Captain Loretta Wildenthaler, '24; Captain Annabelle Todhunter, '25, and Captain "Teddy" Nicholas, '26. Others who were in the Galion limelight fighting for old grads were: Alma Shumaker, '24; Miriam Ransdell, '25; Miriam Spiggle, '25; Martha Ransdell, '26, and Ruth Meeker, '26.

Excelling the high school in floor work the alumni were unable to locate the loop and register the few baskets needed to tie the score or win. Miss Zilpha Marsh, former athletic director, refereed the game and an enthusiastic alumni cheering section furnished the amusement during the game.

R. L. GOETTING UNABLE TO IDENTIFY SUSPECTS

Grocer Says Three Negroes Not Among Those Who Held Up Store

Three negroes arrested as suspects in connection with the attempted hold-up and shooting of R. L. Goetting, local grocer, at his place of business last Saturday night, were released from the county jail yesterday afternoon after having been taken to the Goetting home for possible identification.

None of the suspects were implicated in the hold-up, Mr. Goetting stated. The three men, William Miles, 22, of Jackson, Miss.; William Robison, 28, of Ft. Worth, Tex., and Archie King, 30, of Baton Rouge, La., had been held at the county jail since their arrest in the Erie yards the day following the Goetting hold-up. They were taken to the Goetting home after Mr. Goetting's release from the City Hospital, where he had been under treatment for wounds received in his gun battle with the bandits.

Fourth Suspect

A fourth suspect, Tom Chism, 43, of Charleston, W. Va., was to be taken to the Goetting home some time today. Chism when arrested was attired in a leather coat similar to a coat worn by one of the bandit pair. Miles, one of the trio of suspects released yesterday, also wore a coat of this kind but otherwise did not answer to the description of the bandit.

Chism was arrested several nights ago in the stone quarry district north of the city when officers rounded up a gang of six negro loiterers. His five companions were ordered out of the city.

Firemen Work All Night To Battle Cincinnati Fire

Cincinnati, Jan. 22—After working nearly all night and a great portion of the morning firemen today succeeded in saving the $150,000 wharfboat of the Cincinnati & Louisville Packet Co. from sinking in the Ohio River here.

A group of Marion and Bucyrus youths were taken into Bucyrus police court last night and searched for concealed weapons or firecrackers following the firing of a revolver or report of a firecracker in the Marion section of rooters at the Bucyrus-Harding High basketball game.

The huge auditorium was filled almost to capacity and the game was in full swing when a flash was seen in the audience and a sharp report was heard. Police were called to investigate the source of trouble and took a group of youths from the cheering section to court. The search failed to reveal either weapons or firecrackers.

RUMORED THAT FIGHT WILL GO TO HIGH COURT

Illinois Senator-Designate Declares That He Will See Battle to Finish

BULLETIN

Washington, Jan. 22—The State of Illinois and attorneys for Col. Frank L. Smith today jointly challenged the right of the senate to bar the Illinois senator-designate because of the slush fund charges raised against him in the primary campaign. Appearing before the senate elections committee, counsel for the state and Smith filed a demurrer to the senate's action in closing its doors in Smith's face. The committee, however, admitted in evidence all the testimony taken by the Reed campaign fund committee. Its action definitely linked the campaign fund revelations to Smith's appointment by Gov. Len Small to the vacancy caused by the death of the late William B. McKinley and virtually assured a new investigation of all the slush fund charges.

Washington, Jan. 22—Persistent rumors that the fight of Col. Frank L. Smith, of Illinois, for admission to the senate might be carried into the United States Supreme Court flooded the capitol today as the senate elections committee met to investigate his right to a seat.

FRANK L. SMITH

Although the senate's best constitutional lawyers declared the supreme court would be without jurisdiction over the Smith case, his friends hinted at court action in event he is finally refused admission. The suggestion appeared hopeless, even though Smith's friends pointed out the constitutional right of a state to file a direct suit in the supreme court. The defect in the plan, it was said, would be lack of legal grounds for a suit and the court's lack of power to enforce its decree upon the senate.

Carlstrom at Washington

The Smith forces meanwhile were strengthened by the arrival of Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom, of Illinois, to aid in presenting his case to the elections committee. Carlstrom made the trip, it was said, to testify to the antecedents of Smith's appointment and to defend the right of the Illinois governor to name whom he pleased to the senatorial post.

The committee met incidentally to map out a program of action. Ordered by the senate to investigate Smith's credentials and his "fitness" for service in the senate, the committee sought an agreement between Smith's counsel and Senator James A. Reed, Democrat, of Missouri, on the extent of its proposed inquiry. Reed appeared in the role of "prosecutor" as he sponsored the resolution which barred Smith from taking his oath of office.

Wild Reports Circulated

The senate's action in barring Smith brought in its wake a flood of wild reports that Smith planned to return his credentials to Governor Small and abandon his fight to enter the senate until after next March 4. All these reports were denied by Smith's friends, who declared he was "in the fight to the finish."

One of the reports stated Smith would withdraw and that Governor Small would name a Chicago negro attorney in his stead. This rumor was handled through the senate chamber. Another report said the appointment would be tendered George E. Brennan, who was defeated by Smith in the November the Democratic boss of Chicago, who election.

The rumors were disregarded by Smith's followers.

"They are too silly to bother about denying them," was the only comment from Smith's camp.

Dr. Herman Rhu was installed as new scoutmaster of Troop No. 1 during a meeting of the scouts Thursday in the public library.

Four Marion scouts contested for the Harding Area firemaking medal. It was won by Harry Dorsey of Troop No. 1. The time was 59 seconds. The method used was that of bow and spindle. At the next honor council the champion will be called upon to defend his title.

At the regular meeting of Troop No. 3 last Monday, Scoutmaster Symes announced that Mr. Sampson, an authority on woodcraft, would speak at the next meeting, scheduled for Monday. Mr Symes lectured on the compass and map-making at the meeting.

ROBINSON RESOLUTION LIKELY TO BE PASSED

Senate To Vote on Mexican Controversy Action Plan Monday

Washington Jan. 22—Arbitration of the Mexican Land Law controversy faded somewhat into the background today, despite indications that the senate on Monday will pass the Robinson resolution declaring it to be the sense of that body that the dispute be arbitrated.

President Coolidge left no doubt that he is cool to the proposal, although it is considered doubtful if the administration will interpose any serious objections to the adoption of the Robinson resolution. Opponents of the administration's Mexican policy believe the senate would adopt it even in the face of White House disapproval for the Democrats and Insurgents, who have shown they can control the senate on any given question, are preponderantly behind it.

The renewed emphasis of Mr. Coolidges view, that the crux of the whole controversy is "shall American property be confiscated without being paid for" was not construed today as indicating any favorable drift toward mediation.

The present session of congress is due to end in six weeks. Both President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg are understood to view the passing of congress from the scene without any great regrets for administration officials are bitter over congressional "meddling" in the Mexican situation.

They told their parents of their find and the mother of one of the lads immediately notified police.

The body apparently had been partly buried in the snow but the January thaw had removed most of the snow from the body, exposing it to view.

Girls Lose Second Game in Two Years Under Fair Sex Rules

Marysville, Jan. 22—Marysville High school basketeers turned in another victory last night when they defeated Grandview by a score of 23 to 16 in a close game played at that school last night. M. H. S. girls lost their second game in two years when they went down to defeat before the strong girls' team scored by a score of 22 to 11. The girls attribute their defeat to the fact that they were forced to play under boys' rules, to which they are unaccustomed.

With Stricker and Bump at forward, Mader at center and Laird and Simpson at guard, M. H. S. soon rolled up a big lead and ended the first half with a score of 16 to 6 in their favor. Grandview was held scoreless during the first 15 minutes of play.

The locals continued their onslaught in the second half and rolled up their tally to 20 points at the beginning of the last quarter. Grandview came back strong in the final minutes of play and doubled its tally of eight points to 16 points with a number of lucky shots.

Laird was high scorer for Marysville with three baskets and was followed by Bump who had two baskets and a free throw. Stricker and Mader each were credited with two baskets. Behemer was the main-go of the Grandview outfit making three baskets and was followed by Davis and Hall who each got one.

BOOTLEG CLUB OF GOVERNMENT PROVES "FLOP"

Deficit Made Up from Fund Set Aside To "Buy" Evidence

Washington, Jan. 22—As money-making ventures the government "speak-easies," opened to trap big bootleggers and smugglers, have proven a failure, it was learned today.

It is understood that a deficit for the now-famous Broadway Whist Club, in the theater district of New York, was made up out of government funds set aside for the purchase of evidence against prohibition violators.

The club failed to make expenses, according to the understanding, having been operated with a considerable overhead expense. No information was available as to the salaries paid bartenders, waiters and other employes, some of whom were federal "undercover" men and others stool-pigeons.

Report Submitted

Treasury officials are said to have studied operations of the speak-easies and other undercover methods in preparing a report asked by congress on this plan of prohibition enforcement. The report was submitted to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon today by Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews, dry chief. Some changes may be made before it goes to congress.

Reports were current that in addition to the bootlegging joints in New York, New Jersey and Virginia, similar methods of getting evidence against bootleggers have been employed by the government's secret dry police in other large cities.

Wet congressmen have demanded that the treasury explain the financial details of the speak-easies, and if there were profits, where they went. Officials, however, explained that in the operation of blind-tigers, cost of maintenance was officially recorded as having been incurred in buying evidence.

Plan Canadian Raid

Funds were made available to special agents charged with "getting the goods" on the bootleggers, and they were left to their own resources as to its expenditure.

The treasury may turn a flying squadron or undercover operatives against the Canadian liquor traffic, following the disclosure that over $25,000,000 in "wet goods" were smuggled into the United States last year.

This estimate, from Canadian sources, surprised the treasury, it was stated. Officials believed that the total value of liquor smuggled in the year from all sources did not exceed $20,000,000. In 1926 the estimated value of smuggled liquor was $40,000,000.

There's only one Pontiac Six
-and only General Motors could build it

The Pontiac Six swept into the limelight because it came to the public representing all the skill, resources and experience of General Motors. And it has remained in the limelight from the very day of its introduction, because no other car has since appeared which offers so much for so low a price.

Only General Motors could introduce so dependable a car—because no other maker has at his command the facilities of the General Motors Proving Ground and the combined genius of General Motors' Research Staff and of Oakland engineers.

Only the economies of General Motors' vast purchasing power could make possible at $825—Fisher closed bodies of such outstanding beauty, finished in distinctive Duco colors, and each mounted fine new features as 46 h.p. engine, hydraulic shock absorbers, dual-ratio rear axle, silent second gear transmission, ventilating windshield, and luxurious Bedford broadcloth upholstery of the smartest type.

A full year has passed since the Pontiac Six was introduced, and the unprecedented success of 400,000 owners fully confirms all that Pontiac claimed for it. There is only one Pontiac Six—and only General Motors could build it.

Gossip and Guesses in the World of Sport

By Pat Murphy

Baseball has been upon as high a plane of honesty as any other professional sport since 1920. It has been upon a higher plane than most. For one reason it has been more closely watched, following the episodes from 1917 to 1920.

And there is no reason why it shouldn't be on its best behavior in 1927, the campaign ahead, where it will take an extremely careless thinker to start any juggling.

While the player has been blamed for most of the trouble in past years, there is no question that many magnates have been equally guilty, not in throwing games but in other acts that were almost as bad. These also should have seen something of the light.

The big difference is that baseball has run into a flare of exposing while some of the other pro sports have kept the cover on. If this cover were lifted as far back as 1919 there would be considerable some holding as the populace shuffled by.

It was understood that the Giants are interested in the outcome of the case, as it concerns Cobb, because he would be a great drawing card in New York. At least one other club in the National League is interested in Cobb and Speaker.

It might be considered good politics for the American League to notify the two players that they were qualified to seek other jobs in the American League, but it is almost a dead certainty that neither will consider any more American League connections or associations.

Harding Loses Hard Luck Game to Bucyrus, 32-27

Comeback in Final Period Fails to Win for Locals; Score at Half is 19 to 7

Harding Cagers Get Going in Last Half, but Can't Catch Bucyrus; Game Played on Stage in Bucyrus High School Auditorium; Kish and McKinley Star

BY EDDIE SCHOENLEB
Sports Editor, The Star

HARDING HIGH has the best "second half" basketball team in the North Central Ohio League. But, last night, for the second time this season, it had the painful experience of learning that good second half teams do not always win.

Harding lost its sixth consecutive basketball tilt in as many years to Bucyrus last night, playing on the stage of the huge Bucyrus High School auditorium. The final score was 32 to 27. The score at the half was 19 to 7, with Bucyrus on top.

The term "stage fright" will hardly apply to the first half activities of the Harding High lads last night. The boys were not afraid of the crowd. They just simply could not pull themselves together and get their bearings. The team was up in the air from the initial whistle to the end of the half. Their defense was a miserable failure and the offense—well, we didn't see much of anything that would come under that name.

Leads 7 to 0

Two and one-half minutes after the game started, Bucyrus was leading 7 to 0 and going strong. Lohr made the first point on a free throw, Kish was credited with a couple of charity markers and then dropped in a field goal, and McKinley connected for a bucket. Garrett of Harding High had two personal fouls called on him in the first three minutes of play.

Shults sunk the first counters for Marion when he looped the ball through the net from beyond the center of the floor. It was the only basket for the locals in the first quarter, the period coming to a close with Harding trailing 11 to 2.

Second Quarter Repetition

The second quarter was a repetition of what had gone before, except that Harding showed just a few signs of settling down to business and playing basketball. Gilmore went in for Gillis at center and caged two points immediately while Garrett followed with a couple of more markers. But there the festivities again came to a standstill while Kish and McKinley of Bucyrus raced through Harding's defense for a few buckets. It was with a sigh of relief that Marion fans heard the gun crack for the end of the half.

Had someone been able to kindly remove the lid from the basket at the west end of the stage in the last half last night, Harding High would have won the game. Coming back with a punch in the final minutes, the local basketeers completely outplayed their opponents but simply could not place the ball through the netted hoop. Long shots, follow-up attempts, shots from difficult angles of the court resulted in the same heartbreaking failures. The sphere would rotate about the hoop, dip into the basket, and then roll out.

Come to Life

The Marionites came to life in the third quarter, settled down, and for the first time, during the evening looked like a real basketball outfit. Still McKinley and Kish of Bucyrus strutted through the defense. But their trips down the floor were few and far between. Harding held its own in a rough and tumble affair during the third period and when the gun cracked for the quarter, was trailing only 10 points, 24 to 14.

Marion started the last quarter minus one of its leading forwards. Garrett was removed from the contest late in the third period on personal fouls. Three minutes later, Kish of Bucyrus was also put out of the running on four personals. Shults played back guard for Marion during the last quarter with three personals menacing him. The fouls were the result of the fast pace set by the two teams, beginning early in the game and continuing until the last period, when it became just a little faster.

"Chuck" Evans Again

"Chuck" Evans, going in for Gillis in the final minutes, started the ball rolling for Harding when he dropped in the first bucket of the last quarter. He followed with a loop from the foul line and Harding's "second half" team was on its way.

Ben Gilmore, playing his first game at center, got the hat-off on every occasion. Evans played a bang-up game and received the ball from Gilmore consistently. Shults and McAninch again showed ability as guards, and Bud Cram demonstrated what he could do in the forward position.

Score Slow To Mount

But even then the score was slow in mounting to the level reached by Bucyrus due to the hard luck on shots. With Bucyrus only two points ahead and more than a minute to play, Harding could not tie the score. The aim was there and the ball at times ruined the disposition of the large group of Marion fans by slowly sinking into the bucket, pausing for what seemed an hour to spectators, and then slowly rolling out amid cries of joy from the Bucyrus rooters.

The score was 29 to 27 when, with 15 seconds top lay, someone fouled Monnette of Bucyrus, while he was attempting a basket. The basket counted and Monnette made one of the two free throws awarded him on the foul. The game ended 32 to 27.

Kish and McKinley were the Bucyrus stars. McInley made five field goals and a free throw and Kish was credited with three of each.

Fahey was high scorer for Logan Gasmen with 181 points while Custer led the Stars with 171 pins. Shaffstall, with 486 points, had the highest total score of the match. He bowls with the Logan Gas team.

McFarland led Displaymen with 191 pins in their match with the Postoffice crew and Bartlett tied him at 179 in the games with Y-Indus. L. Cookston, with 190 in the third game, was high scorer for the Postoffice and McColly's 194 mark was high for Y-Indus.

Marion Steam Shovels still lead the Industrial League although they did not bowl this week. Logan Gas is second and Hubers come third. C., D. & M. bowlers rank fourth.

MANSFIELD WINS

Richland County Crew Defeats Delaware, 29-17

Mansfield last night looked like the coming champion of the North Central Ohio Basketball League, when it nosed out Delaware, 29 to 17, on the latter's floor. The half ended 15 to 11 in favor of Mansfield.

Evans starred for Delaware with three field goals and a free throw. Courtney scored 12 points for Mansfield. Mills, former Delaware star, did not play last night and will not be found in any games this season, due to ineligibility.

Mansfield defeated Harding at Mansfield last week and the Marionites meet Delaware in the Star Auditorium here next Friday.

WHO WILL HEAD LEAGUE IF JOHNSON QUITS?

Close followers of baseball believe that the present battle between Commissioner Landis, czar of baseball, and Ban Johnson, president of the American League, whose powers were curtailed by Landis' election years ago, will end in the ousting of Jhonson. With this belief comes discussions as to his possible successor. The three men most prominently mentioned are President E. S. Barnard of the Cleveland club, Owner Col. Jacob Ruppert of the New York Yankees, and Edward Barrow, business manager of that team.

CENTRAL JUNIORS WIN BATTLE WITH MIDGETS

Defeat Old Rivals, 22 to 18, in Fastest Game of Season

Central Junior High cagers last night trounced the Midgets, 22 to 18, in one of the fastest games of the season. Central led the way during the entire contest. It was leading 9 to 5 at the halfway mark.

With two minutes to play in the final period, the score stood 21 to 12 in favor of Central. Three field goals in rapid succession brought the Midgets within three points of victory but just before the whistle blew, Ruhl made a free throw for Central. The game ended 22 to 18.

Next week, the Central Juniors will journey to Galion for a game with the Galion Juniors.

LAST NIGHT'S FIGHTS

At New York—Fidel La Barba, world's flyweight champion, outpointed Elky Clark of Scotland, twelve rounds. Newsboy Brown of the Pacific Coast won decision over Frankie Genaro, former flyweight champion, ten rounds. Billy Kelly of Scranton, Pa., won decision over Trip Limboco of Chicago, ten rounds. Willie Davies won decision over Mickey Durano of New York, four rounds. Benny Brostoff of Brooklyn outpointed Paul Milner of St. Paul, four rounds.

EASY FOR BLISS

Ashland, O., Jan. 22—Bliss Business College, of Columbus, easily defeated Ashland College last night by a score of 60 to 32. Captain Griffin led Bliss in scoring with 10 buckets and three fouls, closely followed by Stewart at right guard with five buckets. The game was an hour late in starting because the Bliss team was stalled near Mt. Vernon by the fog.

One is paid for what he knows if it is worth anything.

LA BARBA WINS

Scores Five Knockdowns In Bout With Elky Clark

New York, Jan. 22—The world included England today for the first time as far as the flyweight situation is concerned, for last night at Madison Square Garden the gifted Fidel La Barba, hitherto champion to everyone's satisfaction except the English, gave Elky Clark, the British challenger, a sincere going over in twelve one-way rounds. It was called a championship match and maybe it was but Clark contributed nothing except his countenance.

Of this, he gave until it hurt and at the end he still was contributing with lavish generosity in spite of the fact that La Barba had scored five knockdowns leaving his invader all but out in the first, third and eighth rounds.

PURDUE BEATS CHICAGO

Chicago, Jan. 22—Western conference basketball standings remained practically unchanged today, as only one Big Ten game was played last night. In that contest, Purdue swamped Chicago, in the latter's gym, 36 to 18.

INDUSTRIAL LOOP GAMES TUESDAY

Games in the Marion Industrial Basketball League Tuesday night include a battle between Hubers and Railway Service, a tilt between Fairfields and Commercials, and a game between Osgood and C., D. & M.

The games will be played Tuesday night, next week, instead of Monday night, due to the fact that the Canto Club concert is scheduled for the Star Auditorium Monday.

HARDING VOCATIONALS DEFEAT BUCYRUS FIVE

Win Over Bucyrus Vocational Preps in Preliminary Event

Harding High Vocational Preps last night did something that the regular Harding varsity team failed in accomplishing. They gave a Bucyrus team a severe walloping and came out on top with a 31 to 8 score. The Bucyrus High Vocational Preps were the victims. The game was played as a preliminary event to the Harding-Bucyrus game on the Crawford County floor.

Humeston of the locals ran wild for eight field goals while Howison made five baskets. The score at the half was 17 to 1. Weber at left guard played the best game for Bucyrus.

CINCINNATI UNVERSITY DEFEATS OHIO U., 48-20

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 22—The Cincinnati University basketball quintet today had chalked up its first Buckeye Association victory with its 48-20 score over Ohio University here last night. A tight defensive play combined with smooth team work, soon dispelled all of the visitor's chances to win. Dubois, of Ohio U., and formerly stellar Hamilton, O., High School athlete, showed some flashy playing for the Athens outfit.

SPORTS WORLD AWAITS RESULT OF "SHOWDOWN"

Marks Time as Leaders of American League Gather

BY GENE HUFFMAN

Chicago, Jan. 22—The sports world marked time today as leaders in whose hands reposes the destiny of baseball were gathering in Chicago to attend what promises to be the most eventful parleys in the history of the national pastime.

The first meeting, to be held tomorrow, will be a round-table conference of directors of the American League, at which President Ban Johnson will learn with what armor, if any, he will be equipped when he and his American League cohorts stride into the "showdown" arena of Commissioner Landis on the following day.

At the latter meeting Landis and Johnson are expected to go to the mat in a finish fight. That is, assuming the veteran prexy of the junior circuit goes into the fray armed with the solid front endorsement of American League magnates. If he fails to get this backing at tomorrow's meeting, Monday's portentous session may prove a "dud," with the gray-thatched commissioner sitting on his throne unchallenged.

The bitter, six-year-old feud between Landis and Johnson reached a new crisis after a two-year truce, with the bursting of the Cobb-Speaker scandal. After Johnson criticized the commissioner for his handling of the case and intimating that all of the story had not been told, Landis summoned this special hearing, ostensibly to delve further into the Cobb-Speaker affair. In reality the Monday hearing appears to be nothing more than a setting for a test of strength between Landis and Johnson.

NEW DOVER IS DEFEATED SECOND TIME IN TWO YEARS

Marysville, Jan. 22—New Dover High School basketball team lost its second game in two years when it went down before the strong New California outfit to the tune of 29 to 7. This is the first time the New Dover quintet has lost to a county team for two years.

TIGER MEETS LOMSKI

Los Angeles, Jan. 22—Tiger Flowers, former middleweight champion of the world, will meet Leo Lomski of Aberdeen, Wash., over the ten round route at Wrigley Field here this afternoon. Walk Miller, "Tiger's" manager, announces he will campaign for Jack Delaney's light heavyweight title should his colored boy defeat Lomski.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventures

BY JUDD MORTIMER LEWIS

TODAY was Saturday, and me and Jubilee were glad of it. It wasn't so much when I let Jubilee down, for what could it was not so offal cold all day, but and it was not so offal cold all day, but it wasn't so warm anyone got sunstruck either. When I had put on my overshoes and went out to milk the cow Jubilee and her sister I had a good chance before the bunch came to look at my plaster. It was kind of rumpled up because I had to fold it up quick to get it in my pocket, but I pulled it all the way apart and folded it over carefully, so it was all right to use at any time.

When I was eating breakfast and looking for a chance to sneak a couple of pancakes for Jubilee my mother asked my grandfather if he was feeling any better since he got his plaster on, and he said he thought his back was all well, but he dassent make a quick move to find out, but he said the plaster had done him a lot of good, and he is going to leave it on for a week.

When the bunch came we talked about whether it was that had tried to milk Rod's father's horse, and how surprised he must have been.

I finely told the bunch about the plaster, and they thought that was a good one on my grandfather, and Feeble said to let's all go over and see Mush and his wife and maybe someone would turn up and we could put a plaster on it. So we went over and went in and stood around the furnace door where it was warm and we didn't do anything we hadn't ought to so they stopped watching us after a while, and I opened up my plaster and stood with my back to the furnace door holding the plaster open back of me to make it good and sticky, and I was watching for Mush to get up so's I could put it in his chair, and his wife said for him to go to the store and get some kidney beans, and he said "All right, Angel Face, get me my hat."

Feeble was standing next to me and I felt her pull the plaster out of my hand, and she said "Sit still, I'll get it for you," and she sidled into the other room and got it and come and put it on him and pressed it down on his head, and kept pushing it and patting it and feeling of it, and telling Mush she could feel the shape of his head right through it, and he sot there and grinned a silly grin like he liked it, and finely his wife gave him a push out of the chair and he went. And we went too, and Feeble said she put it inside of his hat. So whatever happened we missed it, because we didn't dast stay.

We went and slid and skated, and Niba and Peanuts had a fight and Niba got licked. I told him he couldn't lick me, but he wouldn't argue. I went to bed early because my father said to.

Daily Bedtime Story

BY HOWARD GARIS

Uncle Wiggily and His Friends

"SOME one is calling you, Uncle Wiggily," said Nurse Jane Fuzzy to the rabbit gentleman one day as he arose from the breakfast table where he had just eaten the last of the carrot pancakes. I don't mean that the bunny ate all the cakes himself. No, indeed! He was the last one down to breakfast, the little bunny boys and girls having eaten earlier and gone out to play, for there was no school.

"Some one calling me?" asked Mr. Longears, politely wiping off some of the maple syrup from the end of his nose. "I don't hear any one. It may be Scooter or Tooter begging me to come out and play with them."

"I think it isn't Scooter or Tooter," said Nurse Jane.

And when Uncle Wiggily, a moment later, heard the voice, he too, knew it was one of his little bunnies.

"Whoo oo! Uncle Wiggily! Come out!" the voice shouted. "Whoo oo!"

Mr. Longears turned a bit pale around his pink nose.

"I hope that isn't one of the Bad Creatures—Bob Cat, or the Fox," he said.

Nurse Jane looked out of the window, before opening the door, and then she smiled as she said:

"It's only Dazie Wogglejig!"

"That's all right—if it's only Dazie Wogglejig," said Mr. Longears with a sigh of relief. "What is it you want, Dazie?" he asked as he stepped to the door outside of which stood a little dark blue wooden animal girl.

"Could you please come over to our Bungleump right away, Uncle Wiggily?" asked Dazie, taking out her wooden tail and putting it on backward. This she could easily do since both ends of the tail were the same. Dazie could also change her legs about, and take off her wooden head and put it on upside down, if she liked.

"Come over to your bungalow? Of course!" exclaimed Uncle Wiggily. "I suppose something terrible has happened there!" said the rabbit, to Nurse Jane as he hopped out. "Very likely the Wogglejigs are all scrambled and Boppy and Um can't unscramble them." Boppy and Um were the little wooden man and woman who lived with the Wogglejigs in the Bungleump.

But when Uncle Wiggily had skipped across the garden that separated his hollow stump bungalow from the Bungleump of the Wogglejigs, with dark Dazie following on her wooden legs, the bunny gentleman saw nothing alarming. Neither Boppy nor Um was in sight, and none of the other Wogglejigs was there.

"What happened, Dazie?" asked Mr. Longears. "What happened that you wanted me to come over in such a hurry?"

"Nothing has happened yet," said Dazie with a laugh. "But something is going to. I am going to make some dumplings, and I want you to tell me how."

"Dumplings?" gasped Uncle Wiggily.

"Yes," went on the little Wogglejig girl. "Boppy and Um are out, and so are my brothers and sisters. I'm going to make dumplings and surprise them. Now I have the sugar and molasses and chocolate and cocoanut and all I want you to do is to tell me how to mix them to make dumplings!"

"Ha! Ha! Ha!" laughed Uncle Wiggily, chuckling so hard he had to sit down in a chair. "You don't make dumplings that way, Dazie. Dumplings are made of baked beans, mashed with turnings and are baked in the form like a rice pudding with cheese sprinkled over the top. You are thinking of candy, I guess."

"Oh, so I am!" laughed Dazie. "I always get candy mixed up with dumplings! Anyhow, as long as I have the stuff, let's make some candy!"

"All right!" agreed Uncle Wiggily. So he helped the dark blue Wogglejig girl mix up the sugar, molasses, cocoanut and chocolate into some fine candy, which they gave to all the other little

"Could you please come over to our Bungleump?" asked Dazie

Wogglejigs and the bunny boys and girls when they came from play.

"Dazie's 'dumplings' are awful good!" said her sister Mazie with a laugh and all the others said the same thing. So this teaches us that it doesn't make any difference what you call a thing as long as it's good to eat. And if the trolley car will give the jitney bus a nickel to buy some gasoline gum drops I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and Dumple's dinner.

"MERGER RAILS" OCCUPY CENTER OF MARKET STAGE

Reports of Van Sweringens' Activities Causes Heavy Sales, Advancing Prices

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

New York, Jan. 22—Railroad stocks strong; industrials irregular; domestic bonds firm; foreign bonds firm; grain steady; copper steady; oil irregular; cotton steady; rubber steady sugar firm; pig iron steady; foreign exchange steady.

New York, Jan. 22—The "merger rails" held the center of the stage in the short session of the stock market today. Reports that the Van Sweringen interests of Cleveland were seeking stock control of the Western Maryland, control of the Wheeling & Lake Erie and Pittsburgh & West Virginia Roads for the purpose of consolidating them in their Greater Nickel Plate System stirred up unusual speculative interest in the stocks of these roads which jumped into the limelight with heavy sales at advancing prices.

In addition to their merger possibilities, these roads have gradually acquired a more substantial financial standing because of their increases in net earnings in the last two or three years. Wheeling and Lake Erie earned more than $5 a share last year and Western Maryland will report the best year since the end of the war.

Western Maryland common quickly responded to 20 1-4 at the beginning of trading today, up 4 points, while the second preferred rose 2 points to 32 7-8. Wheeling & Lake Erie common sold at 49 1-2 up 3 1-2; preferred at 68, against yesterday's low at 59.

Heavy buying in New Haven common, which carried the price of that stock to above 47 for a new gain of 2 points, was based principally on report that the directors will inaugurate dividend payments this year, out of earnings which are now running at the rate of nearly $6 a share annually. The New Haven has also been mentioned in possible mergers with other roads, the most rumors linking it with Mr. Loree's Delaware & Hudson grouping.

New York, Ontario and Western sold above 27 for a new 2-point gain under the stimulus of merger rumors, this line being a point of contention between the Van Sweringen and the Loree railroad interests. Chicago Great Western, Chicago and Alton and the Old St Paul common and preferred stocks, together with the St. Louis Southwestern and the Kansas City Southern, made up the active list. The Northwestern Rails marked time while awaiting further announcements of the progress of the merger now being arranged by the heads of the various roads in this city, and the Nickel Plate group was comparatively quiet.

The week-end business and mercantile reviews were generally favorable, and the industrial companies reported an increase in their operating schedules. Industry has not yet "found itself" for the new year, while major financial attention appears to be focused on the investment market and the financing of long-term governmental and industrial projects.

COFFEE MARKET

New York, Jan. 22—The coffee futures market opened steady today. Initial prices were from unchanged to 2 points higher. March opened at 14.50, unchanged; May 13.90, up 2, and July 13.25, up 1.

Today in Marion Markets

Groceries, Produce, Meats, Grain, Livestock

Weather conditions brought another dull day for local markets today, with trade slow and movement of many articles practically at a standstill.

Prices were unchanged in retail markets, the quotations holding up despite the dull market.

Strawberries were being sold at 90 cents a quart again today, this price being established when the berries took the first tumble from the top price of $1.25 a quart, quoted when the first arrived on the local market. These berries are selects, picked and packed in the Florida strawberry fields and arriving here in fine condition. The berries are extra large.

Eggs dropped two cents on wholesale markets yesterday, going back to the quotation of several weeks ago. The egg market has been strong, and supplies have kept pace, keeping the quotations balanced. Plenty of eggs are now available and the price on the wholesale exchange has now dropped back to 34 cents a dozen. Fresh eggs are available from 40 cents to 45 cents a dozen, with storage eggs bringing 35 cents to 40 cents a dozen.

HOLD MEN FOR RUNNING TRUCK LOAD OF WHISKY

Cincinnati, Jan. 22—Four Detroit men today were being held under $25,000 bond each, charged with running a truck load of whisky into this city.

JONES FAMILY PROVIDED WITH NEW RESIDENCE

Marion Citizens Respond Generously to Plea for Aid to Fire Victims

Marion citizens responded generously to pleas made in behalf of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jones and their family of eight small children, whose dwelling on Thompson-st was wiped out by fire about a week ago, and yesterday the family, left practically destitute, moved into a rented home at 677 Leo-st which has been equipped with furniture donated by persons living in various parts of the city.

City Relief Officer Charles M. Tobin, who had charge of collecting furniture, clothing and other supplies for the stricken family, stated today that contributions which came in following his pleas made through the press several days ago included furniture, almost enough to fully equip the Jones home, clothing, food and other supplies.

Arranges Settlement

In addition, Mr. Tobin negotiated settlement with the company which held insurance on the furniture destroyed by fire which resulted in $900, the full amount of the policy, being paid to Mr. and Mrs. Jones. As a consequence, the family was well provided for when reunited yesterday in its new home.

Since the fire, which not only wiped out the Thompson-st dwelling and all of its furnishings, but destroyed all of the clothing of Mr. and Mrs. Jones and their children excepting that which they wore at the time, members of the family had been living at the homes of neighbors. The eight children range in age from six months to 14 years.

Express Thanks

Today Mr. and Mrs. Jones requested Relief Officer Tobin to make public their expression of thanks and appreciation to citizens who responded so promptly and generously to the plea for help made in their behalf.

The Thompson-st dwelling of the Jones family was destroyed as the result of a fire which started from an overheated stove while all members of the family were absent. The building was owned by a local real estate dealer and was fully covered by insurance. Mr. Jones recently started to purchase it on a land contract.

Jones is employed in the plant of the Huber Manufacturing Co.

RADIO HOOKUP IS AID IN GETTING EVIDENCE

Cadiz, Jan. 22—A radio hookup between his store and his home, several hundred feet apart, permitting him to listen in on conversations at either place, is proving to be important evidence for Alfred Smylie, East Cadiz station agent, in his $30,000 alienation suit against J. P. Liggett, 70, Hopedale contractor.

Plans, detected in this manner, it was claimed, in Smylie's suit, led to the location of Liggett with Mrs. Smyle in a hotel at East Liverpool.

Buick Ahead Again in the Yellowstone!

Again in 1926, more Buicks toured through Yellowstone Park than any other car except the one of lowest price.

Buick has held this same honor every year since the Park was opened to automobile travel.

This year there were 4,756 Buicks in a total of 44,472 cars registered. 101 different makes were represented in the registrations. One in every ten was a Buick.

Here is convincing evidence of Buick reliability—striking proof of the faith which Buick owners repose in their car.

They know Buick will take them and bring them back comfortably, safely and splendidly—across the Continent—or around the World.

A QUESTION

After reading a few of Hudson-Oh's claims on chicanery, one wonders how long he could last as a modern used car dealer. It would give him a great laugh, we know, to see how conscientiously we recondition our Used Cars before offering them for sale. But the proof of a principle is in its success—and the laugh would be on him, after all.

Marion's Municipal Sewage Treatment Plant Attracts Attention of Many Persons

Officials from Foreign Lands and All Sections of Country Come to City To Study Operation of Works, Register Shows

Marion's municipal sewage treatment plant, completed several years ago to handle the output of the city's sanitary sewer system, is attracting the attention of persons in numerous foreign lands as well as many sections of this country, according to an article appearing in a recent issue of "Better Highways," a monthly magazine published by the Ohio Crushed Stone Association at its main office in Columbus.

The article, attractively illustrated with pictures of the plant, gives a complete description of its construction and method of operation. It reads as follows:

Keeps Register

"From all parts of the United States and many foreign countries persons have come to inspect the sewage treatment plant at Marion, O. A register kept by F. J. Browne, superintendent and chemist, shows that visitors have registered from Roumania, although those do not include Queen Marie; Bulgaria, Argentina, Colombia, San Salvador, Poland, Jugo-Slavia, various sections of Canada and many states of the Union.

"The Marion plant is the standard type of sewage treatment works. The filtering material consists of two-inch broken limestone, laid to a depth of 10 feet over the drainage floor. About 22,500 cubic yards of stone are used. The plant is ably and economically managed and is serving in a highly satisfactory way, under Superintendent Browne's direction, the purpose for which it was intended.

Few Visits

"While every one is vitally interested in sewage disposal, because the very life and health of a community are dependent upon the proper disposal of waste, comparatively few persons have ever visited such an institution and studied first hand its operations and achievements.

"The Marion plant is situated three miles west of Marion along the Little Scioto River. It is known as the Imhoff tank and trickling filter type. It was constructed at a cost of $539,000 and was placed in operation on July 3, 1924, replacing one erected in 1908.

Plant Equipment

"The sewage disposal works consists of bar gratings, grit chambers, venturi meter, two-story or Imhoff settling tanks, pumping station, a twin-dosing tank, trickling filters, secondary settling or humus tanks, glass covered sludge drying beds, and an office and laboratory building. The buildings are located in the middle rear part of an 80-acre tract of land, most of which has been attractively parked.

"The sewage from Marion is delivered to the treatment plant by means of gravitation. It first passes through bar gratings in orde rthat large objects in the sewage may be removed. It is then conveyed to the grit chambers, where sand and grit and other inorganic matter is taken out. Flowing through the venturi meter, where the flow is measured, the sewage reaches the Imhoff tanks, where the major portion of the suspended solids is removed.

"The sewage then passes to the pumping station, where it is raised to the dosing tanks. The dosing tanks apply it to trickling filters which spray it over the crushed stone used as filtering material.

Trickling Filter

"The principle of trickling filter is to oxidize the organic matter in the sewage and produce a practically stable effluent. The sewage passes next to the secondary settling tank, the purpose of which is the removing of the suspended matter that comes from the trickling filters. This is usually a humus matter which collects on the stones and later sloughs off, usually periodically. The effluent finally flows out the river. It is stable and usually high in nitrate, containing a substantial amount of dissolved oxygen. It is then suitable for discharge into the river, having no deleterious effect.

Sludge Beds

"The sludge which settles in the Imhoff tanks is forced into the sludge beds, ten in number, each of which has a drying area of 74 by 17 feet. A layer of sand 12 inches deep lies on two inches of gravel and a six-inch tile drain. The entire sludge drying area is enclosed in glass, which permits drying in any kind of weather. This sludge, which comes out virtually free of odor, is valuable as a fertilizer.

"About 22,500 cubic yards of stone are used in the Marion plant. There is a rapidly growing demand for the use of crushed stone as a filtering medium, it being particularly adapted to the purpose."

A substitute for straw in the weaving of hats has been invented in England from the fibre of sunflower stalks. The new material is light in weight, flexible and airy.

Marion Auto Dealer Trades $125 Used Auto for 54 Acres Laid Out in Town Lots; Gets Title to Hillside

FIFTY-FOUR acres of land laid out in town lots in exchange for a used automobile appraised at $125 has all the earmarks of a ridiculous transaction, but such a deal has been recorded in Marion.

It is only one of several unusual business transactions that have taken place between Lyman D. Jones, local auto dealer and customers located in various parts of the country.

In an effort to reduce the number of used cars which had been traded for new automobiles Mr. Jones hit upon the idea of exchanging used cars for real estate.

Since this idea first bore fruit Mr. Jones has disposed of 86 automobiles in exchange for 453 acres of farm land located in three states, Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky.

19 Cars For a Farm

A year ago in September Mr. Jones traded 19 used cars to W. S. Fogle, Union County, for a 147-acre farm in Union County, valued at $11,500 and on which there was a mortgage of $6,500.

Last June Mr. Jones again exchanged 33 used cars for 80 acres of farm land in Sandusky with C. R. Moyer. This property valued at $12,000 was covered by a $5,000 mortgage.

Then again in August last year Mr. Jones traded 20 cars to C. C. Weaver, Putnam County, for a 100-acre farm and 215 head of sheep. The exact value of the farm has not been determined. The flock of sheep, valued at $2,000, was not encumbered.

The final transaction of this nature in which Mr. Jones has figured was effected this week when he again traded 14 cars for an 80-acre farm in Hancock County. This property is valued at $125 an acre. There is a mortgage on the property amounting to $4,500.

Most Unusual Deal

The trade involving the 54 acres of land laid out in town lots is probably the most unusual deal in which Mr. Jones has figured. At least he terms it such.

When Mr. Jones was offered clear title to the property by a widow in exchange for a used car valued at $125 he accepted, "sight unseen".

The property is located on the outskirts of Vanceburg, Ky. according to Mr. Jones. This small town is along the Ohio River, a short distance from Portsmouth.

"In discussing this unusual deal with a friend of mine," Jones said, "it was suggested that we go to Vanceburg and look over my new possession. We agreed to make the trip. While enroute he wagered that the property was either worth $1,000 or it was valueless.

On Mountain Side

"When we arrived at Vanceburg we discovered that the 54 acres of land in town lots was located on the side of a small mountain. We agreed that is was worthless.

"A short time ago I traded a lot in Marion which I had taken in for an automobile to a man in Indiana for a 40-acre farm. I never saw the property. After selling $40 worth of timber on the property I forgot about it until I received a tax statement. Figuring the land unworth the price of the tax I never paid it. While I still hold the deed for the property it may have been taken over by the state and sold to pay the taxes.

Cars Depreciate Fast

"While some of the deals in which I have engaged may seem ridiculous I look at it this way: a used car depreciates on an average of $1 a day. Holding the 86 cars which I have disposed of in these deals would have cost me $86 a day. With taxes, interest charges and all on these properties my expenses are slightly more than $10 a day.

"Then, too, farm land is always good. The value may drop during periods of depression but when matters are adjusted the price jumps. This is not true with used automobiles.

So far I have broken ahead of the game. Just how the men who have traded their property for my used cars have fared I have no knowledge, but I am of the opinion they encountered some of the difficulties which caused me to trade."

MARION'S FIRE LOSSES BELOW OHIO AVERAGE

Toll Here Last Year Under $74,000, Report of Chief McFarland Shows

Although the toll of property and lives from fire has been increasing steadily throughout the country, losses in the city of Marion have been held at a minimum and are below the average for communities of this size, figures available from the records of Fire Chief McFarland show.

This information is especially important at this time, when the nation-wide fire prevention campaign being conducted this year by the International Association of Fire Chiefs is getting under way. Publicity matter issued in connection with this campaign discloses that destruction from fire is becoming greater year after year throughout the country until now the average property loss has mounted to $2,164,383 every 24 hours.

McFarland's Check

Although Chief McFarland has not completed his report for 1926, figures available now show that the fire loss here last year was less than $74,000. Of this amount, $50,000 resulted from two fires, one at the Smith Mattress Co. plant on Blaine-av and the other at the Boyer grain elevator on Park-blvd.

The number of calls received by the local fire department is increasing each year and the fact that losses are not growing proportionately is regarded as evidence of unusually effective fire protection service.

The largest fire loss in the history of the city was recorded in 1925, when the total mounted to $254,000. This included fires at the Buick and Studebaker garages, the combined loss of the two being $232,000.
